Life on the Desert.
Opportunity Is There.
Alfalfa Beats Gold.
The Hodge Brothers Say.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

Written at Barstow on the Santa Fe, 2,000 feet above the level of the Pacific, which is less than 100 miles away in a straight line.

Are there opportunities left for young Americans in the far west, or are the opportunities all gone?

For an answer, see the Hodge Bros.' alfalfa ranch at Palliser, on the Santa Fe railroad about 12 miles west of here. You will learn courage, ambition and desire to work, will find plenty of opportunities, especially desire to work.

Gilbert and Robert Hodge, of Buffalo, came from a rich family. One of Buffalo's streets is named for them. The money disappeared as American fortunes sometimes do, about the time they were born. That was fortunate for them.

These two brothers, barely 20, did not look for some rich relative to offer a soft spot. They read that desert lands could be made fertile and productive. Under the homestead act and the desert land act the two brothers took up about 500 acres here on the Mojave desert.

The Hodge ranch shows what work can produce in the desert.

A comfortable house for the brothers and their mother take the place of a tent in which the brothers lived and worked until the war broke out. Then they left everything, entered the army and went to Europe.

A little garage houses the car that makes them independent of distance. There is a stable for a team of horses used to cut the alfalfa and run the baling machine and a very contented cow that yields 28 quarts of milk a day on an alfalfa diet.

Everything there the brothers built with their own hands, including pumping station of concrete, the installation of an electric pump and a big reservoir for irrigation that holds 358,000 gallons.

A contractor wanted $2,000 to build the reservoir and guarantee it watertight. The boys didn't have $2,000. They dug and built the reservoir themselves with concrete sufficiently high above the ground. It is watertight.

The materials cost them $175.

For every pound of dry alfalfa put on the land 500 pounds of water—one million pounds of water for a ton of alfalfa. They do it and make it pay. An electric line nearby brings "white power" from the mountains and serves them cheaply.

It costs only $1.50 to pump 350,000 gallons of water. There on the desert, where donkeys and jack rabbits nibble sage brush and "grease wood" shrubs, the water in unlimited quantities is within 18 feet of the surface. And that marvelously fertile soil 15 FEET DEEP washed from mountainsides, through thousands of centuries, produces seven crops of alfalfa between May and October. AND THAT PAYS.

It supplies all the money that the brothers need to live and to improve their property.

Seventeen acres of alfalfa yield each season 127 tons which sell at the railroad siding a mile and a half away for $27 a ton—$3,429 worth of alfalfa from 17 acres. The desert land plus courage, hard work and water yields $184 to the acre.

It is an absolutely sure crop. No failures there. The sun shines all through the growing season. The water rises faithfully from subterranean streams and is directed through irrigation channels to the alfalfa. Seven times they cut it and seven times it grows, a crop more certain than ever was raised in the wonderful Nile valley. Sometimes Nile waters failed in the past. Desert irrigation never fails.

This story is not as exciting as the latest about Hollywood, Wall street, crime or gilded "society." But it's more important to the United States than exciting news.

Given enough men of courage to develop the unlimited resources of the nation, including crops that the deserts can produce and there is no need to worry about the future of the United States.

Is life dull on the desert? Not at all. Every day hundreds of autos pass on their way to the Pacific coast from all over the country. Occasionally great flying machines of the postoffice sweep overhead.

The body of Miss Lowe, which was severed just above the hips, was taken to a local undertaker's parlor, where it will be examined by Coroner Torrence later in the morning.

Miss Detwiler said at the hospital that the party had attended a Dayton theater performance last night and was en route home when the accident occurred. She said they were not aware of the presence of the train until the automobile crashed into it.

Brass Rails Stolen From Pump Station In Houston Avenue

Brass fittings and rails in the No. 2 pump station, Huston avenue, were stolen a few days ago, according to a report made to the police today. Entrance to the building was effected by forcing open the front door.

The pump station has not been in operation regularly since the new plant was erected near the state line. It is maintained, however, as an emergency station.

The value of the loot at junk prices is small, although the replacement value may amount to $100 or more.

The garage of Homer Faulk in Calcutta was entered Saturday night, several hundred dollars worth of tires, tubes and mechanic's tools being stolen. Mr. Faulk is ill in the City hospital. The police were notified of the theft.

Postoffice Menaced By Fire Sunday; Children Blamed

The postoffice, Fifth street and Broadway, was threatened by fire late Sunday afternoon, believed to have been started by children who have been making a practice of loafing in the lobby of the building.

Matches had been applied to the contents of a waste paper box in the lobby of the building. The blaze leaped several feet into the air, but none of the fixtures was damaged.

The janitor of the building, scenting the smoke which filled the entire building summoned Postmaster McClure. The box and its contents was destroyed when discovered. No one was on duty in the building at the time of the blaze.

The police issued a warning today that loafing in the postoffice lobby must cease or arrests will be made.

WOMAN JURIST URGES WORLD BAN ON WAR

PEACE APPEAL

Suggests International Law Declaring Hostilities Illegal.

Enact international laws, making war a crime and punishable just the same as murder, was the advice of Florence E. Allen, Cleveland, judge of the Ohio supreme court, in an address before a fair sized audience in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Saturday night.

Miss Allen came here under auspices of the W. C. T. U., in behalf of a campaign to establish world-wide peace and banish future warfare. She spent the night here and went to Columbiana, East Palestine and Salem for talks on Sunday. Today she is scheduled to address a meeting in Pittsburgh. Her subject was The Supreme Challenge."

"I am not advocating or opposing any world court or league of nations plan, but I do say war must be eliminated if humanity is to survive," said Miss Allen. "We, as a great Christian nation, with other lands working under the cross of Jesus Christ, will be bled to the bone if another war such as the last should occur within the next 10 or 20 years.

Make War Illegal.

"My opinion is that there can be no step toward peace so long as war is recognized as legal. In order to suppress war we should do away with the causes of war and make it illegal.

"I hope the time will come when the men who plan wars will be tried in a court of justice just the same as the man who deliberately premeditates the murder of another is tried. Killing men in masses is just as unjustfiable and illegal as the killing of one man. Then and then only will peace, eternal peace, reign.

Judge Allen has talked with leaders of nations and she is of the opinion that all countries, both large and small, would be willing and eager, in fact, to enter into a treaty making all wars illegal.

Mrs. C. R. Reese, president of Crusade Union, W. C. T. U., was in charge of the meeting. The speaker was introduced by Mayor Charles Brown. Miss Ruth Bailey gave a vocal solo, while the singing was led by Prof. H. F. Laughlin. Prayers were offered by Dr. Frank G. Fowler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, and Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

RADIO THREATS BAFFLE PROBERS

(Copyright 1925, By I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—There's a lot of funny business going on in the air these days and night—if a pile of letters on the desk of chief radio Inspector Terrell, in the department of commerce tells the truth.

Officials were puzzled today over the receipt of an unusual number of complaints from persons in widely separated parts of the country that "psychic broadcasting stations" are operating. "Queer voices" making "spectral threats" have come to them via radio, according to some of the complainants.

Some of the letters obviosuly are the work of unsound minds—"nut letters"—as they are described in government circles—but others are not.

HUNDREDS FLEE FLOOD-SWEPT INDIANA TOWNS

RAILROADS HIT

No Loss of Life Reported; Heavy Property Damage.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Mar. 16.—With miles of the countryside under water today and the rampant Wabash river continuing to rise slowly here, hundreds of families in the low lands fled their homes to the protected districts.

Flood damage already has mounted to thousands of dollars. Bridges were washed away, roads undermined and scores of small farm buildings swept along in the path of the flood.

The Wabash river here stood at 19 feet this morning, with further rise inevitable as 21 feet were reported at Clinton, 15 miles north.

Steam lines as well as interurban roads, were forced to curtail service throughout the district when the flood waters failed to recede. From Peru, Ind., northward, no cars have been operated since early Saturday when the situation first became alarming.

No loss of life has been reported.

WARREN'S NAME AGAIN UNDER FIRE AS SENATE AND WHITE HOUSE CLASH

President's Threat to Give Michigan Man Recess Appointment as Attorney General Projects New Issue of Constitutional Powers Into Fight Between Executive and Capitol Hill.

NATION'S CHIEFTAIN STANDS PAT ON HIS SELECTION FOR CABINET

Warren Opposition Openly Charges Coolidge With Attempting to Override Senate's Constitutional Authority to "Advise and Consent" on Appointments and Predicts Second Rejection.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, March 16.—President Coolidge having defied the new senate to keep Charles W. Warren out of his cabinet, that body prepared today to reject his attorney general nomination for the second time.

The president's threat to give Warren a recess appointment projected a new issue of constitutional powers into the clash between the executive and the senate. The Warren opposition openly charged the president with attempting to override the senate's constitutional authority "to advise and consent" on cabinet appointments and grimly announced the Warren appointment would be rejected as many times as the executive named him to head the department of justice.

The president sent word to administration leaders of the senate that he had in no wise retreated from the position he took Saturday night when he defied the senate to prevent Warren entering the cabinet. The president was reported as willing to make a national issue out of the controversy since he felt the senate had used a cabinet position as a political "football." His spokesmen said he was determined on a finish fight.

Goff Defends Warren.

The senate convened at 10:30 this morning for the final act in the Warren drama. An agreement provided for four hours debate before the final vote and with that taken, a recess was planned until tomorrow to give the president opportunity to consider its final action on the Warren nomination.

"We won't adjourn the special session," said Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, minority leader, "until the president says he has no further nominations to submit."

Senator Goff, Republican, of West Virginia, in his maiden speech, opened the administration final drive to confirm Warren. Goff was formerly assistant attorney-general.

"Warren is eminently fitted for the office," Goff said.

Goff read a prepared biographical sketch of Warren, in which particular emphasis was laid on the nominee's legal training and qualifications, which had been assailed so bitterly by Democrats and progressives.

Goff told of the award of a distinguished service medal to Warren for his services "in preparing the legal details for the draft."

In the citation, the president said Warren displayed unusual patriotism, loyalty and executive ability," declared Goff.

In emphasis, Goff fairly shouted the last three words.

Reed Assails Nominee

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, spoke first for the Warren opposition.

"I agree that Mr. Warren was faithful to his trust," said Reed. "His trust was the sugar trust and he served it faithfully. It takes a vivid imagination to set up a claim that his sugar trust connection was 30 years ago. He appeared as lawyer for the sugar trust in federal hearings concluded in 1922 and he can't even plead

Police Preserve Order as Crowd Goes to Senate

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The biggest crowd within memory swarmed over the capitol today and into the senate galleries.

An hour before the senate convened, the senate lobbies became so jammed that it was necessary to call out police reserves to preserve order, and the elevators were stopped to prevent any more persons from getting near the senate galleries.

Expectation that there would be another fight in the senate similar to that on Saturday is said to have caused the rush for seats.

Enact international laws, making war a crime and punishable just the same as murder, was the advice of Florence E. Allen, Cleveland, judge of the Ohio supreme court, in an address before a fair sized audience in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Saturday night.

Miss Allen came here under auspices of the W. C. T. U., in behalf of a campaign to establish world-wide peace and banish future warfare. She spent the night here and went to Columbiana, East Palestine and Salem for talks on Sunday. Today she is scheduled to address a meeting in Pittsburgh. Her subject was The Supreme Challenge."

"I am not advocating or opposing any world court or league of nations plan, but I do say war must be eliminated if humanity is to survive," said Miss Allen. "We, as a great Christian nation, with other lands working under the cross of Jesus Christ, will be bled to the bone if another war such as the last should occur within the next 10 or 20 years.

Make War Illegal.

"My opinion is that there can be no step toward peace so long as war is recognized as legal. In order to suppress war we should do away with the causes of war and make it illegal.

"I hope the time will come when the men who plan wars will be tried in a court of justice just the same as the man who deliberately premeditates the murder of another is tried. Killing men in masses is just as unjustfiable and illegal as the killing of one man. Then and then only will peace, eternal peace, reign.

Judge Allen has talked with leaders of nations and she is of the opinion that all countries, both large and small, would be willing and eager, in fact, to enter into a treaty making all wars illegal.

Mrs. C. R. Reese, president of Crusade Union, W. C. T. U., was in charge of the meeting. The speaker was introduced by Mayor Charles Brown. Miss Ruth Bailey gave a vocal solo, while the singing was led by Prof. H. F. Laughlin. Prayers were offered by Dr. Frank G. Fowler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, and Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

RADIO THREATS BAFFLE PROBERS

(Copyright 1925, By I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—There's a lot of funny business going on in the air these days and night—if a pile of letters on the desk of chief radio Inspector Terrell, in the department of commerce tells the truth.

Officials were puzzled today over the receipt of an unusual number of complaints from persons in widely separated parts of the country that "psychic broadcasting stations" are operating. "Queer voices" making "spectral threats" have come to them via radio, according to some of the complainants.

Some of the letters obvlosuly are the work of unsound minds—"nut letters"—as they are described in government circles—but others are not.

HUNDREDS FLEE FLOOD-SWEPT INDIANA TOWNS

No Loss of Life Reported; Heavy Property Damage.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Mar. 16.—With miles of the countryside under water today and the rampant Wabash river continuing to rise slowly here, hundreds of families in the low lands fled their homes to the protected districts.

Flood damage already has mounted to thousands of dollars. Bridges were washed away, roads undermined and scores of small farm buildings swept along in the path of the flood.

The Wabash river here stood at 19 feet this morning, with further rise inevitable as 21 feet were reported at Clinton, 15 miles north.

Steam lines as well as interurban roads, were forced to curtail service throughout the district when the flood waters failed to recede. From Peru, Ind., northward, no cars have been operated since early Saturday when the situation first became alarming.

No loss of life has been reported.

WARREN'S NAME AGAIN UNDER FIRE AS SENATE AND WHITE HOUSE CLASH

President's Threat to Give Michigan Man Recess Appointment as Attorney General Projects New Issue of Constitutional Powers Into Fight Between Executive and Capitol Hill.

NATION'S CHIEFTAIN STANDS PAT ON HIS SELECTION FOR CABINET.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, March 16.—President Coolidge having defied the new senate to keep Charles W. Warren out of his cabinet, that body prepared today to reject his attorney general nomination for the second time.

The president's threat to give Warren a recess appointment projected a new issue of constitutional powers into the clash between the executive and the senate. The Warren opposition openly charged the president with attempting to override the senate's constitutional authority "to advise and consent" on cabinet appointments and grimly announced the Warren appointment would be rejected as many times as the executive named him to head the department of justice.

The president sent word to administration leaders of the senate that he had in no wise retreated from the position he took Saturday night when he defied the senate to prevent Warren entering the cabinet. The president was reported as willing to make a national issue out of the controversy since he felt the senate had used a cabinet position as a political "football." His spokesmen said he was determined on a finish fight.

Goff Defends Warren.

The senate convened at 10:30 this morning for the final act in the Warren drama. An agreement provided for four hours debate before the final vote and with that taken, a recess was planned until tomorrow to give the president opportunity to consider its final action on the Warren nomination.

"We won't adjourn the special session," said Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, minority leader, "until the president says he has no further nominations to submit."

Senator Goff, Republican, of West Virginia, in his maiden speech, opened the administration final drive to confirm Warren. Goff was formerly assistant attorney-general.

"Warren is eminently fitted for the office," Goff said.

Goff read a prepared biographical sketch of Warren, in which particular emphasis was laid on the nominee's legal training and qualifications, which had been assailed so bitterly by Democrats and progressives.

Goff told of the award of a distinguished service medal to Warren for his services "in preparing the legal details for the draft."

In the citation, the president said Warren displayed unusual patriotism, loyalty and executive ability," declared Goff.

In emphasis, Goff fairly shouted the last three words.

Reed Assails Nominee

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, spoke first for the Warren opposition.

"I agree that Mr. Warren was faithful to his trust," said Reed. "His trust was the sugar trust and he served it faithfully. It takes a vivid imagination to set up a claim that his sugar trust connection was 30 years ago. He appeared as lawyer for the sugar trust in federal hearings concluded in 1922 and he can't even plead

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The biggest crowd within memory swarmed over the capitol today and into the senate galleries.

An hour before the senate convened, the senate lobbies became so jammed that it was necessary to call out police reserves to preserve order, and the elevators were stopped to prevent any more persons from getting near the senate galleries.

Expectation that there would be another fight in the senate similar to that on Saturday is said to have caused the rush for seats.

the Pacific about 75 miles way for an ocean bath, bringing them back to the ranch in time for bed at 10 and a fresh start at 5 a. m. That's the routine there.

For those that care to dream dreams, after they have irrigated their alfalfa fields, pumped the water, leveled off new lands, milked the cow and beded down the horses there is plenty of food for the imagination near Barstow. A few miles away to the west are oil wells working. Fifteen miles in the other direction a powerful company is drilling. There are marble quarries in the hills. The Calico mine from which fifty millions in gold have already been taken has been reopened. Another gold mine is operated nearby.

The 500 acres that these brothers took up under the homestead and desert land act, putting in such earnest work are worth today $50,000 because they have proved that the land is perfect for alfalfa.

And let farmers in the east imagine this.

The young men do not plough the soil. That would turn up the sour land beneath and bury the thin top coating of soil that contains the desert's small amount of humus.

They scratch the soil with a spring tooth harrow, sow the alfalfa seed and cut their seven crops a year, using no fertilizer.

Alfalfa needs lime and iron. The soil is strong in both. Neighboring hills are of rock that is almost pure lime. And the deep alfalfa roots lo the plowing, sweeten the soil, supply the humus.

If you talk to the Hodge brothers about oil and gold they smile and say that oil and gold are interesting, and he who chooses may hunt for them. But alfalfa that grows seven crops a year is good enough for them.

They live on their own land, spending for its improvement the money that they take from the earth, contented in their work, absolutely certain of the future, and a thousand times rewarded for their labor by the happiness of their widowed mother who lives with them, enjoying the success of the boys that she brought up so well.

If you know any better life than that please mention it.

For information about acquiring desert land under the homestead and desert lands act, write to your congressman or to the secretary of the interior at Washington.

There are thousands of square miles of this desert land. But don't touch it unless you mean to contribute hard work and courage. The government will help you select land that has water within reach below the surface and that will grow crops.

To know how to get to Barstow write to the office of the Santa Fe at Chicago. When you get there Mr. White, who represents the Santa Fe in Barstow will tell you how to get information and show you the fine new town that they are building on top of the hill to replace the old town.

Is the case of the Hodge brothers exceptional and not to be duplicated? No.

Five miles east of them on the same road is the Emerson ranch, of 160 acres. The owner who bought it from some discouraged owner, with more desire for money than for work, paying for it just $24, 15 cents an acre, has just sold his place for $30,000. He started ahead of the Hodge boys, planted alfalfa first as they did, then having got the land right by irrigation and the humus that alfalfa puts into ground, he turned into fruit, grapes, pears, almonds.

He is putting his $30,000 into gold mine proposition. Perhaps he has done better than stick to the ranch. Let's hope so.

The Hodge brothers, proceeding cautiously by the way have added melon growing to their alfalfa.

The only difficulty there is that the melons grow so big they are not commercially available for the average restaurant, the portions would be too big.

But Fred Harvey, food king of the Santa Fe, buys them. Watermelons, casabas, Spanish melons and all the desert dwellers and workers will tell you that the melons cannot be equaled or their alfalfa either by the fields of the Imperial valley.

There are opportunities left in the United States, plenty of them, provided you feel inclined to work and can endure existence more than two blocks away from a moving picture show with only the stars at night to take the place of the screen stars.

Concluding services of the Anderson M. E.-Nazarene church revival campaign were conducted at the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon and evening.

More than 260 persons professed conversion or sanctification during the series of meetings which were in charge of Evangelist I. M. Ellis of Bethany, Okla. Many of the new converts have already been admitted to the church rolls, while others will unite later.

Ward brothers' orchestra played at the Sunday afternoon service. Selections were also given by a quartet, made up of Prof. and Mrs. Kenneth Wells, Mrs. O. L. Benedum and Rev. J. H. Smith. Rev. Ellis preached on "Divine Healing." The sick were anointed by Rev. G. M. Formby of Grand Crossing, Fla., at the conclusion of the preaching service.

A musical program preceded the evening service. The evangelist based his sermon on the subject, "The Unpardonable Sin." Evangelist Ellis and Prof. and Mrs. Wells left today for a series of meetings in Muncie, Ind. Prof. Wells will go to Pasadena, Cal., next fall, where he will take charge of the voice department at Pasadena University. Rev. Society Milliner Loses Fight to Save Burglar From Jail

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—Mrs. Ada B. Woodson, Washington society milliner who, after a search of two years, found her missing daughter married to Morris J. At the expiration of this sentence he will be returned to Elmira for thirteen months and twenty days to finish serving a term for burglary.

Despite testimony by investigators that Seldow had committed bigamy in marrying Mary, her daughter, Mrs. Woodson announced she would appeal to Governor Smith for a pardon.

Warren's Name

the statute of limitations as a defense."

The president's authority to resubmit Warren's name was challenged by Senator King, Democrat of Utah, who inserted in the record a resolution declaring the act unconstitutional. King said he would not ask for a vote on his resolution but wanted it a part of the record so that the constitutional issue could be raised if the president gave Warren a recess appointment.

The King resolution would hold that "resubmission of the nomination at the present session of the senate is not in the constitutional prerogatives of the president and that the consideration of the said resubmitted nomination after final action has been taken thereon(is contrary to the constitution and to the rules of the senate as well as incompatible with the dignity and prerogatives of the senate."

If Warren is given a recess appointment, King warned, he will call up this resolution at the net session of the senate. Its passage would be without precedent in the history of the government.

Gillett Rebukes Senate.

Senator Gillett, Republican of Massachusetts, in his first speech, came vigorously to the defense of Warren. He mildly rebuked the senate for "the volume of time consumed here in comparison with the other end of the Capitol."

Gillett formerly was speaker of the house.

"It has been the custom for scores of years not to refuse a presidential cabinet appointment unless the appointeeise charged with flagrant incompetency", sail Gillett. "Mr. Warren has not been thus charged."

"If we shut out men because they have been connected with big business, then we deny public employment to the most competent men of the country".

Gillette said Warren "was with the so-called sugar trust when congress was first framing anti-trust laws, and nobody knew from year to year what the changes in the law would be."

Directs Fire at Couzens.

Gillett then directed his fire at Couzens, Republican, of Michigan, one of the leaders in the fight against Warren.

"The senator from Michigan says that 96 per cent of the people of Michigan do not want Warren confirmed," said Gillett. "The senator evidently got his information from a source that he knew would be favorable to his own view. The Michigan legislature passed a resolution asking that Warren be confirmed, and did this despite an attempt to have the resolution sidetracked and sent to the committee. I hold that the Michigan legislature knows as much about the sentiment of Michigan as the tax-ridden senator from that state."

"Doesn't the senator (Gillett) believe that the sentiment of the Michigan delegation in congress knows as much about the sentiment of the state as does the legislature?" asked Couzens.

"Yes, of course."

"Well, of the 13 members in the house and two senators, I do not know of one that favors Warren's confirmation," snapped Couzens.

"The senator is wrong in that," Replied Gillet. "I know that the delegation is not unanimously against Warren," replied Gillett.

Politics In Debate.

Politics was brought into the debate when Gillett twitted Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, for having declined the Democratic vice-Presidential nomination last year.

"It would have been a blow to Montana if both her Senators had been defeated as vice-Presidential nominees in the same year," said Gillett.

"The senator infers that partisan motives inspired the opposition to Warren," said senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas. "Does not he know that the Republican vice-Presidential nomination was tendered to Senator Borah, of Idaho, who is leading Republican opposition to Mr. Warren?"

Senator William A. Borah, a Republican, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also opposed the nomination in a speech that frequently drew applause from the galleries.

"The argument has been advanced that the senate ought to yield to the President, ought to treat our obligation under the constitution as nothing but a courteous gesture," said Borah. "I do not think so."

"No senate and no senator would challenge the President unless for the most important reasons, reasons that they believe to be guiding and impelling. This, I think is such a time.

"Down through the history of the years, if there has been a dereliction of duty here, it is not on the side of opposing the President but toward giving the President sole responsibility when the constitution places a share of that responsibility inescapably upon us."

Borah's Vitrolic Satire.

With vitrolic satire, Borah compared Gillett to a "former senator from Massachutetts, one Daniel Webster." Borah said Webster had voted against an ambassadorial appointment, "for sufficient reasons," and made a speech "against executive domination." Borah said he would let the country judge of the Wisdom of the conflicting courses followed by the two Massachusetts senators.

"It is much easier to go along in Washington than to disagree," said Borah. "If there is any atmosphere on God's green earth that ewakens backbone, it is the Washington atmosphere.

"I firmly believe that Mr. Warren is unfit for this office. I do not challenge the integrity of the President for if he had my conviction toward Mr. Warren, he would follow it. If I do less here, I would quickly forfeit the President's respect. I cannot and shall not vote to confirm this man for attorney general.

"I have no quarrel with the man who thinks Warren is fitted for the office," said Borah. "I quarrel only with that man who thinks Warren is unfit but votes for him."

"There are many men who have acquired great wealth and property in the United States who are living in daily violation of our laws," said Borah. "They should be the first to obey the law, but they are daily forming great trusts and combinations in violation of the law."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, March 16.—Industrial and railroad stocks made a show of strength at the opening of the market today and prices for most of the active stocks were fractionally higher. However, before the end of the first hour such pivotal stocks as Baldwin, General Electric and American Can were down to 1 to 3 points. Bethlemeh Steel, American Woolen and other active stocks which bore the brunt of heavy selling last week again under pressure and declined abruptly.

Commodity prices showed further declines. Money conditions were better.

The grain market was lower at the opening and cotton with the exception of March contracts, also showed a loss in early trading.

Heaviness increased in the second hour and stocks were thrown on the market in large blocks at f alling prices. United States Steel lost a full point from its opening price. Active Copper, Motor, railroad, equipment and oil stocks followed the same trend. Thought there were no developments in the St. aul receivership situation traders sold the preferred stock heavily and it declined 2 points from the opening price to a new low at 13¾. The bonds were also unsteady, but not so ponicky as last week. Savage Arms, Allis Chalmers, American Razor and other pob stocks made a firm stand in the firs hour, but were compelled to recede against bearish attacks. American Can made the best showing of the industrial leaders and sold in good volume around 180. Later this stock led the market in a moderate rally.

The oils and railroad stocks were driven off less than the main body of the industrials and trading in them was in smaller volume. Frisco common and Norfolk and Western were strong spots in the railroad list; Marland oil and Shell Union made the best showing in the independent oils. The market slowed up under pressure and short selling accounted for the bulk of offerings. Call money was four per cent.

TODAY

the Pacific about 75 miles way for an ocean bath, bringing them back to the ranch in time for bed at 10 and a fresh start at 5 a. m. That's the routine there.

For those that care to dream dreams, after they have irrigated their alfalfa fields, pumped the water, leveled off new lands, milked the cow and beded down the horses there is plenty of food for the imagination near Barstow. A few miles away to the west are oil wells working. Fifteen miles in the other direction a powerful company is drilling. There are marble quarries in the hills. The Calico mine from which fifty millions in gold have already been taken has been reopened. Another gold mine is operated nearby.

The 500 acres that these brothers took up under the homestead and desert land act, putting in such earnest work are worth today $50,000 because they have proved that the land is perfect for alfalfa.

And let farmers in the east imagine this.

The young men do not plough the soil. That would turn up the sour land beneath and bury the thin top coating of soil that contains the desert's small amount of humus.

They scratch the soil with a spring tooth harrow, sow the alfalfa seed and cut their seven crops a year, using no fertilizer.

Alfalfa needs lime and iron. The soil is strong in both. Neighboring hills are of rock that is almost pure lime. And the deep alfalfa roots lo the plowing, sweeten the soil, supply the humus.

If you talk to the Hodge brothers about oil and gold they smile and say that oil and gold are interesting, and he who chooses may hunt for them. But alfalfa that grows seven crops a year is good enough for them.

They live on their own land, spending for its improvement the money that they take from the earth, contented in their work, absolutely certain of the future, and a thousand times rewarded for their labor by the happiness of their widowed mother who lives with them, enjoying the success of the boys that she brought up so well.

If you know any better life than that please mention it.

For information about acquiring desert land under the homestead and desert lands act, write to your congressman or to the secretary of the interior at Washington.

There are thousands of square miles of this desert land. But don't touch it unless you mean to contribute hard work and courage. The government will help you select land that has water within reach below the surface and that will grow crops.

To know how to get to Barstow write to the office of the Santa Fe at Chicago. When you get there Mr. White, who represents the Santa Fe in Barstow will tell you how to get information and show you the fine new town that they are building on top of the hill to replace the old town.

Is the case of the Hodge brothers exceptional and not to be duplicated?

No.

Five miles east of them on the same road is the Emerson ranch, of 160 acres. The owner who bought it from some discouraged owner, with more desire for money than for work, paying for it just $24, 15 cents an acre, has just sold his place for $30,000. He started ahead of the Hodge boys, planted alfalfa first as they did, then having got the land right by irrigation and the humus that alfalfa puts into ground, he turned into fruit, grapes, pears, almonds.

He is putting his $30,000 into gold mine proposition. Perhaps he has done better than stick to the ranch. Let's hope so.

The Hodge brothers, proceeding cautiously by the way have added melon growing to their alfalfa.

The only difficulty there is that the melons grow so big they are not commercially available for the average restaurant, the portions would be too big.

But Fred Harvey, food king of the Santa Fe, buys them. Watermelons, casabas, Spanish melons and all the desert dwellers and workers will tell you that the melons cannot be equaled or their alfalfa either by the fields of the Imperial valley.

There are opportunities left in the United States, plenty of them, provided you feel inclined to work and can endure existence more than two blocks away from a moving picture show with only the stars at night to take the place of the screen stars.

Anderson M. E. and Nazarene Church Revival Closes.

Concluding services of the Anderson M. E.-Nazarene church revival campaign were conducted at the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon and evening.

More than 260 persons professed conversion or sanctification during the series of meetings which were in charge of Evangelist I. M. Ellis of Bethany, Okla. Many of the new converts have already been admitted to the church rolls, while others will unite later.

Ward brothers' orchestra played at the Sunday afternoon service. Selections were also given by a quartet, made up of Prof. and Mrs. Kenneth Wells, Mrs. O. L. Benedum and Rev. J. H. Smith. Rev. Ellis preached on "Divine Healing." The sick were anointed by Rev. G. M. Formby of Grand Crossing, Fla., at the conclusion of the preaching service.

A musical program preceded the evening service. The evangelist based his sermon on the subject, "The Unpardonable Sin." Evangelist Ellis and Prof. and Mrs. Wells left today for a series of meetings in Muncie, Ind. Prof. Wells will go to Pasadena, Cal. next fall, where he will take charge of the voice department at Pasadena University. Rev. Formby tomorrow begins a week's meeting in the Nazarene church at Alliance. He will be assisted by Ward brothers' orchestra.

Society Milliner Loses Fight to Save Burglar From Jail

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—Mrs. Ada B. Woodson, Washington society milliner who, after a search of two years, found her missing daughter married to Morris J. Seldow, burglar and bakery wagon driver, lost the legal fight to save Seldow from jail today when he was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse for assaulting a passenger in 1923 while employed as a motorman by the New York Railway company.

At the expiration of this sentence he will be returned to Elmira for thirteen months and twenty days to finish serving a term for burglary.

Despite testimony by investigators that Seldow had committed bigamy in marrying Mary, her daughter, Mrs. Woodson announced she would appeal to Governor Smith for a pardon.

Warren's Name

The president's authority to resubmit Warren's name was challenged by Senator King, Democrat of Utah, who inserted in the record a resolution declaring the act unconstitutional. King said he would not ask for a vote on his resolution but wanted it a part of the record so that the constitutional issue could be raised if the president gave Warren a recess appointment.

The King resolution would hold that "resubmission of the nomination at the present session of the senate is not in the constitutional prerogatives of the president and that the consideration of the said resubmitted nomination after final action has been taken thereon(is contrary to the constitution and to the rules of the senate as well as incompatible with the dignity and prerogatives of the senate."

If Warren is given a recess appointment, King warned, he will call up this resolution at the net session of the senate. Its passage would be without precedent in the history of the government.

Gillett Rebukes Senate.

Senator Gillett., Republican of Massachuesetts, in his first speech, came vigorously to the defense of Warren. He mildly rebuked the senate for "the volume of time consumed here in comparison with the other end of the Capitol."

Gillett formerly was speaker of the house.

"It has been the custom for scores of years not to refuse a presidential cabinet appointment unless the appoin feeise harged with flagrant incompetency", sail Gillett. "Mr. Warren has not been thus charged."

"If we shut out men because they have been connected with big business, then we deny public employment to the most competent men of the country".

Gillette said Warren "was with the so-called sugar trust when congress was first framing anti-trust laws, and nobody knew from year to year what the changes in the law would be."

Directs Fire at Couzens.

Gillett then directed his fire at Couzens, Republican, of Michigan, one of the leaders in the fight against Warren.

"The senator from Michigan says that 96 per cent of the people of Michigan do not want Warren confirmed," said Gillett. "The senator evidently got his information from a source that he knew would be favorable to his own view. The Michigan legislature passed a resolution asking that Warren be confirmed, and did this despite an attempt to have the resolution sidetracked and sent to the committee. I hold that the Michigan legislature knows as much about the sentiment of Michigan as the tax-ridden senator from that state."

"Doesn't the senator (Gillett) believe that the sentiment of the Michigan delegation in congress knows as much about the sentiment of the state as does the legislature?" asked Couzens.

"Yes, of course."

"Well, of the 13 members in the house and two senators, I do not know of one that favors Warren's confirmation," snapped Couzens.

"The senator is wrong in that," Replied Gillet. "I know that the delegation is not unanimously against Warren," replied Gillett.

Politics In Debate.

Politics was brought into the debate when Gillett twitted Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, for having declined the Democratic vice-Presidential nomination last year.

"It would have been a blow to Montana if both her Senators had been defeated as vice-Presidential nominees in the same year," said Gillett.

"The senator infers that partisan motives inspired the opposition to Warren," said senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas. "Does not he know that the Republican vice-Presidential nomination was tendered to Senator Borah, of Idaho, who is leading Republican opposition to Mr. Warren?"

Senator William A. Borah, a Republican, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also opposed the nomination i n a speech that frequently drew applause from the galleries.

"The argument has been advanced that the senate ought to yield to the President, ought to treat our obligation under the constitution as nothing but a courteous gesture," said Borah. "I do not think so."

"No senate and no senator would challenge the President unless for the most important reasons, reasons that they believe to be guiding and impelling. This, I think is such a time.

"Down through the history of the years, if there has been a dereliction of duty here, it is not on the side of opposing the President but toward giving the President sole responsibility when the constitution places a share of that responsibility inescapably upon us."

Borah's Vitrolic Satire.

With vitrolic satire, Borah compared Gillett to a "former senator from Massachutetts, one Daniel Webster." Borah said Webster had voted against an ambassadorial appointment, "for sufficient reasons," and made a speech "against executive domination." Borah said he would let the country judge of the Wisdom of the conflicting courses followed by the two Massachusetts senators.

"It is much easier to go along in Washington than to disagree," said Borah. "If there is any atmosphere on God's green earth that ewakens backbone, it is the Washington atmosphere.

"I firmly believe that Mr. Warren is unfit for this office. I do not challenge the integrity of the President for if he had my conviction toward Mr. Warren, he would follow it. If I do less here, I would quickly forfeit the President's respect. I cannot and shall not vote to confirm this man for attorney general.

"I have no quarrel with the man who thinks Warren is fitted for the office," said Borah. "I quarrel only with that man who thinks Warren is unfit but votes for him."

"There are meny men who have acquired great wealth and property in the United States who are living in daily violation of our laws," said Borah. "They should be the first to obey the law, but they are daily forming great trusts and combinations in violation of the law."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, March 16.—Industrial and railroad stocks made a show of strength at the opening of the market today and prices for most of the active stocks were fractionally higher. However, before the end of the first hour such pivotal stocks as Baldwin, General Electric and American Can were down to 1 to 3 points. Bethlemeh Steel, American Woolen and other active stocks which bore the brunt of heavy selling last week again under pressure and declined abruptly.

Commodity prices showed further declines. Money conditions were better.

The grain market was lower at the opening and cotton with the exception of March contracts, also showed a loss in early trading.

Heaviness increased in the second hour and stocks were thrown on the market in large blocks at f alling prices. United States Steel lost a full point from its opening price. Active Copper, Motor, railroad, equipment and oil stocks followed the same trend. Thought there were no developments in the St. aul receivership situation traders sold the preferred stock heavily and it declined 2 points from the opening price to a new low at 13½. The bonds were also unsteady, but not so ponicky as last week. Savage Arms, Allis Chalmers, American Razor and other pop stocks made a firm stand in the firs hour, but were compelled to recede against bearish attacks. American Can made the best showing of the industrial leaders and sold in good volume around 180. Later this stock led the market in a moderate rally.

The oils and railroad stocks were driven off less than the main body of the industrials and trading in them was in smaller volume. Frisco common and Norfolk and Western were strong spots in the railroad list; Marland oil and Shell Union made the best showing in the independent oils. The market slowed up under pressure and short selling accounted for the bulk of offerings. Call money was four per cent.

The park commission today announced that the strictest business judgment will be exercised in the expenditure of the money received and that improvement that will be of greatest benefit to the majority of the citizens will be given preference.

"Dollar Day in the mercantile business is indicative of exceptional values. This Dollar Day is no exception to the rule. What greater bargain was ever offered to the citizens of Wellsville than to purchase an interest in the promoting of Hammond park for the sum of one dollar? It will pay big dividends in the form of enjoyment after the day's work is done, to take the family to the park there to breathe the invigorating air of the country, to see the children romp and play and not fear the street cars or automobiles."

DISCOUNT FIRM HEADS ON TRIAL

Wellsville district stockholders in the Cleveland Discount Co., today turn their eyes to the Fifth City where Josiah Kirby, founder and first president of the company, and Raymond L. Poland, its former treasurer, buttressed by an imposing array of legal counsel, go on trial in common pleas court, charged with issuance of a false statement, in violation of the state blue sky laws.

Mrs. Kirby, who had come across the continent, from California, sat by the side of her husband in the dingy court room as the trial opened. Former Appelate Judge Walter Meals, Luther Day and Joseph C. Brietenstein were at Kirby's counsel table. The staff was represented by special prosecutors Charles Higley, Joseph I. Eagleson and David E. Green.

It was anticipated that several days would be taken in securing a jury, due to the fact that more than 10,000 stockholders in the discount company reside here.

Kirby was confident of prompt acquittal when court opened.

"I am innocent of the charge against me," he declared. "I am completely confident that I shall be vindicated by the court and jury."

William H. Hopple, of Tiffin, O., one of the largest stockholders in the Discount company, and who acted as president for a short time following Kirby's resignation, two years ago, was one of the witnesses summoned for the state. Twenty witnesses have been called by the defense.

Youth's Arm Fractured.

FILES CHARGES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Ronald Gibson has filed a petition for divorce against his wife, Edna Gibson, through his counsel, Attorney W. A. O'Grady. They were married May 15, 1920, and have two children, aged 3 and five years, respectively.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with having an uncontrollable temper, and when enraged, she becomes violent and "has threatened to kill plaintiff at divers times," the petition relates.

The petition declares that on May 15, 1920, while in a fit of temper Mrs. Gibson threw a heavy china vase at the head of her husband and then she attacked him, tearing his clothing and choking and striking him.

The petition put down May 18, 1922, as the date when Mrs. Gibson is alleged to have thrown an alarm clock at her husband and also struck him with a smoothing iron.

While riding with her husband in the side car of a motorcycle on July 4, 1922, according to the petition, she became enraged and attempted to steer the vehicle over an embankment with intent to injure the plaintiff. On July 5, 1922, it is alleged, she threatened to kill her husband.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with failure to care for her home or give proper attention to the moral welfare of their children, and that she has adopted vile and vicious habits, constantly cursing and swearing and using such language in the presence of her children.

The husband also claims she locked him in their home while she attended carnivals and moving picture shows. The petition asks the court to grant the father the custody of the minor children.

Two Training Camps.

Wellsville youths who expect to go to citizens' military training camp this summer will be able to choose between two such camps, one at Camp Knox, Ky., and the other at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

John Fickes of Riverside avenue, this city, is equipped with application blanks for prospective campers. Columbiana county already has reported 15 applicants, including Donald E. Burgett, from Salineville.

The majority of students this year will go to Camp Knox for the month of July, although 1,500 basic and advanced infantry students from Indiana and Ohio can be accommodated at Fort Benjamin Harrison from July 8 to August 6. The cavalry, air service, signal corps and engineering students will go to Knox.

POEMS THAT LIVE

POEMS THAT LIVE

For What Is Life?

For what is life, if measured by the space,
Not by the act?
Or masked man, if valued by his face,
Here's one outlived his peers,
And told forth fourscore years:
He vexed time, and busied the whole state;
Troubled both foes and friends;
But ever to no ends;
What did this stirrer, but die late? late?
How well at twenty had he fallen or stood?

Most Autos Bought on Credit.

Statistics for the automobile industry have figured out that about 80 per cent of the automobiles owned in the United States—and the United States owns 82 per cent of the cars in the world—are bought on credit each year. The expenditure is about $3,000,000,000.

The park commission today announced that the strictest business judgment will be exercised in the expenditure of the money received and that improvement that will be of greatest benefit to the majority of the citizens will be given preference.

Officers of the commission issued the following appeal to citizens of the city:

"Dollar Day in the mercantile business is indicative of exceptional values. This Dollar Day is no exception to the rule. What greater bargain was ever offered to the citizens of Wellsville than to purchase an interest in the promoting of Hammond park for the sum of one dollar? It will pay big dividends in the form of enjoyment after the day's work is done, to take the family to the park there to breathe the invigorating air of the country, to see the children romp and play and not fear the street cars or automobiles."

DISCOUNT FIRM HEADS ON TRIAL

Wellsville district stockholders in the Cleveland Discount Co., today turn their eyes to the Fifth City where Josiah Kirby, founder and first president of the company, and Raymond L. Poland, its former treasurer, buttressed by an imposing array of legal counsel, go on trial in common pleas court, charged with issuance of a false statement, in violation of the state blue sky laws.

Mrs. Kirby, who had come across the continent, from California, sat by the side of her husband in the dingy court room as the trial opened. Former Appelate Judge Walter Meals, Luther Day and Joseph C. Brietenstein were at Kirby's counsel table. The staff was represented by special prosecutors Charles Higley, Joseph I. Eagleson and David E. Green.

It was anticipated that several days would be taken in securing a jury, due to the fact that more than 10,000 stockholders in the discount company reside here.

Kirby was confident of prompt acquittal when court opened.

"I am innocent of the charge against me," he declared. "I am completely confident that I shall be vindicated by the court and jury."

William H. Hopple, of Tiffin, O., one of the largest stockholders in the Discount company, and who acted as president for a short time following Kirby's resignation, two years ago, was one of the witnesses summoned for the state. Twenty witnesses have been called by the defense.

E. G. MORROW IS BIRTHDAY HOST

E. G. Morrow entertained a number of his friends on Friday night at his home in Third street, the affair honoring his fifty-seventh birthday anniversary.

An elaborate program of entertainment was carried out, during which the honor guest was presented with a number of gifts, including a smoking outfit with an electric attachment for reading, and a leather traveling bag.

Mr. Morrow welcomed his guests in a short address following which J. F. Deimer took the chair as toastmaster. Among the outstanding features of the program were recitations by Miss Phyllis Carter, of Salineville; and Miss Pia Bologna, of this city, both of whom also distributed flowers to the guests.

Three vocal selections were given by George Imbrie, of this city, accompanied by Dr. A. D. Weinsweig.

A humorous talk was given by Frank Turner. Short speeches were made by Attorney W. F. Lones and Roy Thomas. A number of songs and stories, several in dialect, were given by A Morrow.

At the close of the program a buffet luncheon was served.

The guests included: Albert Morrow, E. G. Whitacre, B. D. Beacom, W. F. Lones, R. H. Keay, Mayor James S. Barnes, W. L. Fogo, J. F. Deimer, George Imbrie, Dr. A. D. Weinsweig, John Rehman, A. B. She is survived by her husband, Watson Faloon, and three children, Mrs. Homer Toban, L. A. Faloon and Willis Faloon, all of Wellsville; one grand child, Nova Faloon; a brother, Davis Shaw of Summitville, and one sister, Rebecca Faloon of Kensington.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in Spring Hill cemetery.

AMOS RUSSELL, 70, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Following an illness of several months, Amos Russell, 70 years old, of Tenth street, died Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock in the East Liverpool hospital, death being due to complications. He had been in the hospital for several months. The body was removed to the D. N. MacLean funeral home.

He is survived by one nephew, Frank MacLean, in Wilkinsburg, Pa., and several nieces in Cleveland.

Funeral services will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the MacLean chapel, in Riverside avenue, in charge of Rev. Harry Stewart, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church. Burial will be made in Spring Hill cemetery.

Youth's Arm Fractured.

The engine, presumably, backfired, and the flying crank struck young Workman's right arm between the elbow and the wrist, fracturing a bone.

FILES CHARGES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Ronald Gibson has filed a petition for divorce against his wife, Edna Gibson, through his counsel, Attorney W. A. O'Grady. They were married May 15, 1920, and have two children, aged 3 and five years, respectively.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with having an uncontrollable temper, and when enraged, she becomes violent and "has threatened to kill plaintiff at divers times," the petition relates.

The petition declares that on May 15, 1920, while in a fit of temper Mrs. Gibson threw a heavy china vase at the head of her husband and then she attacked him, tearing his clothing and choking and striking him.

The petition put down May 18, 1922, as the date when Mrs. Gibson is alleged to have thrown an alarm clock at her husband and also struck him with a smoothing iron.

While riding with her husband in the side car of a motorcycle on July 4, 1922, according to the petition, she became enraged and attempted to steer the vehicle over an embankment with intent to injure the plaintiff. On July 5, 1922, it is alleged, she threatened to kill her husband.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with failure to care for her home or give proper attention to the moral welfare of their children, and that she has adopted vile and vicious habits, constantly cursing and swearing and using such language in the presence of her children.

The husband also claims she locked him in their home while she attended carnivals and moving picture shows. The petition asks the court to grant the father the custody of the minor children.

Two Training Camps.

Wellsville youths who expect to go to citizens' military training camp this summer will be able to choose between two such camps, one at Camp Knox, Ky., and the other at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

John Fickes of Riverside avenue, this city, is equipped with application blanks for prospective campers. Columbiana county already has reported 15 applicants, including Donald E. Burgett, from Salineville.

The majority of students this year will go to Camp Knox for the month of July, although 1,500 basic and advanced infantry students from Indiana and Ohio can be accommodated at Fort Benjamin Harrison from July 8 to August 6. The cavalry, air service, signal corps and engineering students will go to Knox.

For What Is Life?

For what is life, if measured by the space,
Not by the act?
Or masked man, if valued by his face,
Here's one outlived his peers.
And told forth fourscore years;
He vexed time, and busied the whole state;
Troubled both foes and friends;
But ever to no ends;
What did this stirrer, but die late?
How well at twenty had he fallen or stood?

Dead Line for Income Tax

Today is the last day of grace on the payment of the 1924 income tax.

Mailed returns postmarked before midnight will be acceptable, Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Fred George, on duty at th postoffice, has announced. Failure to report your earnings and make at least a quarterly payment of the year's taxes will result in assessment of a penalty.

Through the action of a Republican congress, the rate has been cut in half. On incomes under $5,000, two per cent instead of four per cent tax is assessed, with a 25 per cent reduction also permitted.

And indications are that President Coolidge's appeal for further tax reductions will be heeded by congress before the time for payment on 1925 earnings. Washington reports are to the effect that the rate will be cut at least 25 per cent when congress meets next December.

At the next session of congress, Representative Madden, chairman of the appropriations committee in the house, will call up his resolation which would result in making income taxes automatic. This plan would do away with continuous income legislation. It would mean that when the treasury had a surplus of more than $50,000,000 a proportionate automatic decrease would be made in everyone's income tax.

All this means that every effort is to be made to carry out President Coolidge's promise to the people that whenever possible federal taxes would be lowered.

Marriage and Meals

Thousands of people have been laughing over the "Breakfast," "Lunch" and "Dinner" stories in the Ladies' Home Journal.

One is the woman who has stood one too many grouchy breakfast moods of her husband's, who packs to leave home, and who, as the cords of her normal, friendly existence tighten about her, finds as much difficulty accounting for her suitcase as any criminal with a bag of loot. One is of the husband who, resenting his wife's objection to his bringing an unannounced luncheon guest, decides to live a nobly and silently suffering life apart, who moves his belongings into the sewing room, only to find, as the cords of normal, friendly existence tighten around him, that his wife will never even find out what he mussed up her sewing room for. Then there is the husband, raging against the wife who telephoned him to do last-minute errands for her formal dinner, trying desperately to nurse his wrath while luxuriously relaxing in his hot bath, and finding the dinner proceeding perfectly well, regardless of his fury.

All these, with their aura of comradely living, seem peculiarly humorous partly because they so narrowly escape the tragic, partly because almost everyone has experienced similar difficulties.

Most matrimonial troubles, whether before, at or after meals, come to this: Between any two people, however happily mated, there is an irreducible minimum of misunderstanding. When they can stand off and laugh at it, they are all right. When they cannot, they are apt to find it becoming a tragic minimum.

A Lama in London

Seven Lamas from far-off Tibet have been enticed out into the world and are visiting London. They are seeing things new and strange to them. An interpreter is giving some of their impressions to the public. After watching a man working an electric drill on the streets, one of the Tibetan visitors is reported to have commented to this effect:

"The English are a very clever people. They are much clever than we are. But they do not use their arms enough. It would be much better for that man if he used his arms instead of holding that machine. The machines in England are wonderful, but I think that if the English are not careful the machines will master them and make them do what they want."

There is much material for serious thought in the Lama's words. All of the modern conveniences, inventions, machines and new ways of doing things more quickly and easily and cheaply than ever before will fail to benefit mankind if human beings allow mechanical development to get too far ahead of moral, intellectual and spiritual development. It takes more than powerful machinery, clever mechanical devices and material wealth to keep a civilization alive and healthy.

Man, The Killer

An unbelievably strange incident, one of those usually regarded as invented by the human imagination, is related by the foreman of a section crew on the Glacier Park division of the Great Northern railway. This man saw a deer from the national park floating down the Flathead river on a cake of ice. Not far from a falls, where deer would have met certain death, the frightened animal took advantage of the current which carried the ice floe within 10 feet of the shore. The deer jumped, landing at a place where the railroad track skirts the shore of the river, and falling directly in front of an advancing train. It was struck and hurled back into the river dead.

The poor beast had almost miraculously avoided violent death in one form to meet it instantly in another. It was the only deer in that section killed by a train in several years, while a dozen or more of its fellows that had wandered outside of the reservation have been killed by hunters during the past winter. Man still seems to be a worse menace to wild life than either nature or fate.

The Toonerville Trolley That Meets All The Trains — By Fontaine Fox

HASKIN'S LETTER

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Dealing With Steel Workers.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Steel workers have benefitted more than miners from the industrial representation plan of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Such is the conclusion reached as the result of a long investigation conducted by the department of industrial studies of the Russell Sage Foundation.

The men employed in the steel works of the company controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., were able to secure the actual eight-hour work day five years before the United States Steel corporation and other large employers in the steel industry were forced to concede it to their employes. This, the report declares, was a direct and immediate result of industrial representation under the so-called Rockefeller plan.

When this plan was established in the coal mines of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company it was as a peace measure following one of the longest and bitterest strikes in the history of the country. No strike of all the workers in the steel mills of the company had ever occurred up to that time and they were given representation without having asked for it and without having presented any complaints or grievances to the management. That was in May, 1916. Less than two years later they secured the actual eight-hour day, which was nothing short of a startling improvement in their working conditions, and then, singularly enough, within a year practically all of them walked out when the general strike of steel workers was called.

When one considers that the prevailing working day in the essential processes of the industry was at the time, and for almost five years afterwards, 12 hours, the introduction of the actual eight-hour day throughout the Minnequa steel works was an achievement of first importance, says the report. When the Steel corporation announced in 1918 the establishment of the basic eight-hour day, the Rockefeller company first proposed a similar arrangement in its mills. That is, while the men would continue to work more than eight hours—and most of them 12 hours—they would be paid on the basis of an eight-hour day with and a half for all time worked over eight hours.

Had to Consult Employes.

But while in the plants of the Steel corporation the basic eight-hour day was established as a recommendation of Judge Gary without soliciting the views of the employes, in the Minnequa steel works it was necessary first to consult the employes' representatives regarding the method of introducing the change, and when the representatives of the mechanical department were called in they declared that they wanted a real eight-hour day, rather than a basic eight-hour day. The management agreed to that, whereupon the representatives from all other divisions of the works made a similar demand, and accordingly the actual instead of the basic eight-hour day was adopted throughout the plant.

"Thus," says the expert of the Sage foundation, "it was the machinery provided by the industrial representation plan that for the first time in the United States enabled the employes of a large steel works to negotiate collectively with their employers on the very controversial question of the length of the working day, and to secure the actual eight-hour day in all departments of the plant."

Where the representation plan does not function so happily for the steel workers of the Rockefeller company, it is stated, is in the matter of fixing wage scales, for it provides that the company shall pay the same rates of wages as its competitors, which in practice means that they will follow the rates established from time to time by the United States Steel corporation.

Progressive industrial managers have shown that it is not necessary for a plant to adopt with absolute uniformity the scale of wages paid by its competitors, since the cost of production which is the important point to an employing corporation, varies with local conditions.

A company must keep its cost of production as low as that of its competitors. it may, however, because of more efficient organization or of lower freight rates or of its ability to get its raw materials more easily and cheaply, be able to pay higher wages than its competitors without exceeding the competitive selling price. it is doubtful, therefore, whether the Colorado Fuel and Iron company must always follow the Steel corporation in fixing its wage rates. The company itself when it adopted the actual eight-hour day in 1918, proved that it was not compelled to follow blindly standards set by its competitors.

Why the Steel Workers Struck.

It was this question of wages and the feeling that in reality no steel workers anywhere in the country had any real voice in fixing wage rates, since the Steel corporation established the scales through its executive board, that led employes of the Rockefeller company to join in the general steel strike of 1919.

"For before the strike, it is pointed out in the conclusions reached by these investigators, "they had already enjoyed the eight-hour day as well as several other conditions which the men in the rest of the industry so badly wanted. Yet when the strike call was issued to the steel workers of the country in September, 1919, the men employed by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, with very few exceptions walked out. This extraordinary response was due to a desire to help build an organization powerful enough to demand industrial citizenship for the workers throughout the industry and thus to guarantee them a voice in determining what the basic standards of pay and work should be.

"At present, then, the scope of the industrial representation plan is seriously limited. It is true that in an industry so devoid of any tradition concerning representation of the workers as the steel industry, the plan marks a distinct step in advance toward recognizing the workers' aspiration. Under the plan the men of the Minnequa steel works secured such important gains as the actual eight-hour day, an opportunity to participate in revising wage scales, a method of presenting and discussing grievances, and a greater degree of security in their jobs through enjoying the right to appeal to higher officials against the decisions of foremen and superintendents.

"Nevertheless, until the men throughout the industry as a whole secure adequate and effective representation in determining wage standards, those employed in any one plant, such as the Minnequa, are bound to be dissatisfied. Every week the Minnequa workers are reminded by their pay envelopes that the scope of their representation does not give them an effective share in determining their own earnings and none whatever in determining those of their fellow workers in the steel industry at large."

The most serious obstacle to the success of the Rockefeller plan, according to Ben M. Selekman, who conducted the investigation for the Sage foundation, is the minor official and not the higher official of the company. He says that as long as the functions of "hiring and firing" are in the hands of foremen and superintendents there will be dissatisfaction and complaints of favoritism and arbitrariness. It is also important, he says, that promotions should be made uniformly upon the basis of seniority.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

PARIS, March 16.—I have met the most celebrated sportsman and bon vivant of France. His name is pretty well known in America as the result of cabled stories of young American beauties falling desperately in love with him.

He is Henri Letellier, best known as the proprietor of Le Journal, one of the leading newspapers of Paris. I expected to see a dashing, excitable and monocled Beau Brummel—a fellow who radiated enthusiasm and the sheer joy of living.

Instead I saw a slight, thin, flat chested man whose face reminded you of the beak of a pelican. He was dressed with the modesty of a counting house clerk. He seemed tired, listless and worn. Yet he was on his way to one of his celebrated all night parties at his home in Rue Spontini.

Latellier has a hundred different interest—all profitable. He is a plunger at the race track and the gaming tables. He owns some of the casinos. Several American stage beauties are reported to owe their ropes of pearls to his generosity.

He is said to be amazingly attractive to those women of the world to be found always in Paris. They are the migratory birds of passage you find in the bazaars of Bagdad, the shooting boxes of the Highlands. In London, Venice and Algiers. They fly everywhere.

I do not believe M. Letellier would cause a head to turn on Fifth avenue in New York. Yet in the hotel foyer where he stood everybody stopped to look at him. Some were peeping from behind marble pillars. Others walked up to him and looked him over with frank curiosity.

Parisians love the man who takes a big chance. Letellier has for years followed Neitzche's advice: "Be hard; live dangerously." His papers are daring and progressive and what he makes out of them and his other enterprises he spends with lavish hand. And France loves that.

One often sees Mabelle Gilman Corey among the butterflies. Having reaped a fortune through her marriage with W. E. Corey, the steel man, she is able to entertain lavishly. She still looks fairly youthful when others her age are beginning to show imprint of Time. She has adopted the bird-like quickness of manner of the French. She is one of the few women in Paris whose hair is not bobbed.

Paris has many sidewalk entertainers we used to know on the old Bowery as "buskers." They make their stand in front of theaters and eat fire, swallow swords and do feats of magic for the few centimes that are pitched them. The Paris "busker" has reduced living to a minimum. He can exist on about 25 cents a week. He sleeps in doorways and cadges food and drink by performing in the little circular bars.

It is the law in France that the best literature must be in cheap paper back form in reach of the poor. It is a constructive bit of legislation, but is spoiled by the laxity in permitting the most flagrant exhibits of pornography to be sold everywhere. Every book stall displays volumes that would send the seller to prison in America.

Dead Line for Income Tax

Today is the last day of grace on the payment of the 1924 income tax.

Mailed returns postmarked before midnight will be acceptable, Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Fred George, on duty at th postoffice, has announced. Failure to report your earnings and make at least a quarterly payment of the year's taxes will result in assessment of a penalty.

Through the action of a Republican congress, the rate has been cut in half. On incomes under $5,000, two per cent instead of four per cent tax is assessed, with a 25 per cent reduction also permitted.

And indications are that President Coolidge's appeal for further tax reductions will be heeded by congress before the time for payment on 1925 earnings. Washington reports are to the effect that the rate will be cut at least 25 per cent when congress meets next December.

At the next session of congress, Representative Madden, chairman of the appropriations committee in the house, will call up his resolation which would result in making income taxes automatic. This plan would do away with continuous income legislation. It would mean that when the treasury had a surplus of more than $50,000,000 a proportionate automatic decrease would be made in everyone's income tax.

All this means that every effort is to be made to carry out President Coolidge's promise to the people that whenever possible federal taxes would be lowered.

Marriage and Meals

Thousands of people have been laughing over the "Breakfast," "Lunch" and "Dinner" stories in the Ladies' Home Journal.

One is the woman who has stood one too many grouchy breakfast moods of her husband's, who packs to leave home, and who, as the cords of her normal, friendly existence tighten about her, finds as much difficulty accounting for her suitcase as any criminal with a bag of loot. One is of the husband who, resenting his wife's objection to his bringing an unannounced luncheon guest, decides to live a nobly and silently suffering life apart, who moves his belongings into the sewing room, only to find, as the cords of normal, friendly existence tighten around him, that his wife will never even find out what he mussed up her sewing room for. Then there is the husband, raging against the wife who telephoned him to do last-minute errands for her formal dinner, trying desperately to nurse his wrath while luxuriously relaxing in his hot bath, and finding the dinner proceeding perfectly well, regardless of his fury.

All these, with their aura of comradely living, seem peculiarly humorous partly because they so narrowly escape the tragic, partly because almost everyone has experienced similar difficulties.

Most matrimonial troubles, whether before, at or after meals, come to this: Between any two people, however happily mated, there is an irreducible minimum of misunderstanding. When they can stand off and laugh at it, they are all right. When they cannot, they are apt to find it becoming a tragic minimum.

A Lama in London

Seven Lamas from far-off Tibet have been enticed out into the world and are visiting London. They are seeing things new and strange to them. An interpreter is giving some of their impressions to the public. After watching a man working an electric drill on the streets, one of the Tibetan visitors is reported to have commented to this effect:

"The English are a very clever people. They are much clever than we are. But they do not use their arms enough. It would be much better for that man if he used his arms instead of holding that machine. The machines in England are wonderful, but I think that if the English are not careful the machines will master them and make them do what they want."

There is much material for serious thought in the Lama's words. All of the modern conveniences, inventions, machines and new ways of doing things more quickly and easily and cheaply than ever before will fail to benefit mankind if human beings allow mechanical development to get too far ahead of moral, intellectual and spiritual development. It takes more than powerful machinery, clever mechanical devices and material wealth to keep a civilization alive and healthy.

Man, The Killer

An unbelievably strange incident, one of those usually regarded as invented by the human imagination, is related by the foreman of a section crew on the Glacier Park division of the Great Northern railway. This man saw a deer from the national park floating down the Flathead river on a cake of ice. Not far from a falls, where deer would have met certain death, the frightened animal took advantage of the current which carried the ice floe within 10 feet of the shore. The deer jumped, landing at a place where the railroad track skirts the shore of the river, and falling directly in front of an advancing train. It was struck and hurled back into the river dead.

The poor beast had almost miraculously avoided violent death in one form to meet it instantly in another. It was the only deer in that section killed by a train in several years, while a dozen or more of its fellows that had wandered outside of the reservation have been killed by hunters during the past winter. Man still seems to be a worse menace to wild life than either nature or fate.

HASKIN'S LETTER

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Dealing With Steel Workers.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Steel workers have benefitted more than miners from the industrial representation plan of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Such is the conclusion reached as the result of a long investigation conducted by the department of industrial studies of the Russell Sage Foundation.

The men employed in the steel works of the company controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., were able to secure the actual eight-hour work day five years before the United States Steel corporation and other large employers in the steel industry were forced to concede it to their employes. This, the report declares, was a direct and immediate result of industrial representation under the so-called Rockefeller plan.

When this plan was established in the coal mines of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company it was as a peace measure following one of the longest and bitterest strikes in the history of the country. No strike of all the workers in the steel mills of the company had ever occurred up to that time and they were given representation without having asked for it and without having presented any complaints or grievances to the management. That was in May, 1916. Less than two years later they secured the actual eight-hour day, which was nothing short of a startling improvement in their working conditions, and then, singularly enough, within a year practically all of them walked out when the general strike of steel workers was called.

When one considers that the prevailing working day in the essential processes of the industry was at the time, and for almost five years afterwards, 12 hours, the introduction of the actual eight-hour day throughout the Minnequa steel works was an achievement of first importance, says the report. When the Steel corporation announced in 1918 the establishment of the basic eight-hour day, the Rockefeller company first proposed a similar arrangement in its mills. That is, while the men would continue to work more than eight hours—and most of them 12 hours—they would be paid on the basis of an eight-hour day with and a half for all time worked over eight hours.

Had to Consult Employes.

But while in the plants of the Steel corporation the basic eight-hour day was established as a recommendation of Judge Gary without soliciting the views of the employes, in the Minnequa steel works it was necessary first to consult the employes' representatives regarding the method of introducing the change, and when the representatives of the mechanical department were called in they declared that they wanted a real eight-hour day, rather than a basic eight-hour day. The management agreed to that, whereupon the representatives from all other divisions of the works made a similar demand, and accordingly the actual instead of the basic eight hour day was adopted throughout the plant.

"Thus," says the expert of the Sage foundation, "it was the machinery provided by the industrial representation plan that for the first time in the United States enabled the employes of a large steel works to negotiate collectively with their employers on the very controversial question of the length of the working day, and to secure the actual eight-hour day in all departments of the plant."

Where the representation plan does not function so happily for the steel workers of the Rockefeller company, it is stated, is in the matter of fixing wage scales, for it provides that the company shall pay the same rates of wages as its competitors, which in practice means that they will follow the rates established from time to time by the United States Steel corporation.

Progressive industrial managers have shown that it is not necessary for a plant to adopt with absolute uniformity the scale of wages paid by its competitors, since the cost of production which is the important point to an employing corporation, varies with local conditions.

A company must keep its cost of production as low as that of its competitors it may, however, because of more efficient organization or of lower freight rates or of its ability to get its raw materials more easily and cheaply, be able to pay higher wages than its competitors without exceeding the competitive selling price. It is doubtful, therefore, whether the Colorado Fuel and Iron company must always follow the Steel corporation in fixing its wage rates. The company itself when it adopted the actual eight-hour day in 1918, proved that it was not compelled to follow blindly standards set by its competitors.

Why the Steel Workers Struck.

It was this question of wages and the feeling that in reality no steel workers anywhere in the country had any real voice in fixing wage rates, since the Steel corporation established the scales through its executive board, that led employes of the Rockefeller company to join in the general steel strike of 1919.

"For before the strike, it is pointed out in the conclusions reached by these investigators, "they had already enjoyed the eight-hour day as well as several other conditions which the men in the rest of the industry so badly wanted. Yet when the strike call was issued to the steel workers of the country in September, 1919, the men employed by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, with very few exceptions walked out. This extraordinary response was due to a desire to help build an organization powerful enough to demand industrial citizenship for the workers throughout the industry and thus to guarantee them a voice in determining what the basic standards of pay and work should be.

"At present, then, the scope of the industrial representation plan is seriously limited. It is true that in an industry so devoid of any tradition concerning representation of the workers as the steel industry, the plan marks a distinct step in advance toward recognizing the workers' aspiration. Under the plan the men of the Minnequa steel works secured such important gains as the actual eight-hour day, an opportunity to participate in revising wage scales, a method of presenting and discussing grievances, and a greater degree of security in their jobs through enjoying the right to appeal to higher officials against the decisions of foremen and superintendents.

"Nevertheless, until the men throughout the industry as a whole secure adequate and effective representation in determining wage standards, those employed in any one plant, such as the Minnequa, are bound to be dissatisfied. Every week the Minnequa workers are reminded by their pay envelopes that the scope of their representation does not give them an effective share in determining their own earnings and none whatever in determining those of their fellow workers in the steel industry at large."

The most serious obstacle to the success of the Rockefeller plan, according to Ben M. Selekman, who conducted the investigation for the Sage foundation, is the minor official and not the higher official of the company. He says that as long as the functions of "hiring and firing" are in the hands of foremen and superintendents there will be dissatisfaction and complaints of favoritism and arbitrariness. It is also important, he says, that promotions should be made uniformly upon the basis of seniority.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

PARIS, March 16.—I have met the most celebrated sportsman and bon vivant of France. His name is pretty well known in America as the result of cabled stories of young American beauties falling desperately in love with him.

He is Henri Letellier, best known as the proprietor of Le Journal, one of the leading newspapers of Paris. I expected to see a dashing, excitable and monocled Beau Brummel—a fellow who radiated enthusiasm and the sheer joy of living.

Instead I saw a slight, thin, flat chested man whose face reminded you of the beak of a pelican. He was dressed with the modesty of a counting house clerk. He seemed tired, listless and worn. Yet he was on his way to one of his celebrated all night parties at his home in Rue Spontini.

Latellier has a hundred different interest—all profitable. He is a plunger at the race track and the gaming tables. He owns some of the casinos Several American stage beauties are reported to owe their ropes of pearls to his generosity.

He is said to be amazingly attractive to those women of the world to be found always in Paris. They are the migratory birds of passage you find in the bazaars of Bagdad, the shooting boxes of the Highlands. In London, Venice and Algiers. They fly everywhere.

I do not believe M. Letellier would cause a head to turn on Fifth avenue in New York. Yet in the hotel foyer where he stood everybody stopped to look at him. Some were peeping from behind marble pillars. Others walked up to him and looked him over with frank curiosity.

Parisians love the man who takes a big chance. Letellier has for years followed Neitzche's advice: "Be hard; live dangerously." His papers are daring and progressive and what he makes out of them and his other enterprises he spends with lavish hand. And France loves that.

One often sees Mabelle Gilman Corey among the butterflies. Having reaped a fortune through her marriage with W. E. Corey, the steel man, she is able to entertain lavishly. She still looks fairly youthful when others her age are beginning to show imprint of Time. She has adopted the bird-like quickness of manner of the French. She is one of the few women in Paris whose hair is not bobbed.

Paris has many sidewalk entertainers we used to know on the old Bowery as "buskers." They make their stand in front of theaters and eat fire, swallow swords and do feats of magic for the few centimes that are pitched them. The Paris "busker" has reduced living to a minimum. He can exist on about 25 cents a week. He sleeps in doorways and cadges food and drink by performing in the little circular bars.

It is the law in France that the best literature must be in cheap paper back form in reach of the poor. It is a constructive bit of legislation, but is spoiled by the laxity in permitting the most flagrant exhibits of pornography to be sold everywhere. Pulque, a beverage in Mexico which has a hold on the working classes similar to the vodka habit in Russia some years ago, is being made the target of leaders in that country who believe its prohibition or strict regulation will eliminate some of the misery of the lower classes. RESUME RAIL RATE HEARING MONDAY, MAR. 30

Pottery Manufacturers Oppose Increase In Charges

EYES ON FIGHT

Charles F. Donley, Traffic Counselor, Submits Report.

Hearings on the application of the railroads of the country for permission to increase rates east of the Mississippi river, which move is being protested by the local Chamber of Commerce, will be resumed on Monday, March 30.

Charles F. Donley, Pittsburgh traffic counselor, is representing the Chamber of Commerce and the United States Potters association at the hearing. Local manufacturers are opposing the increased freight rates but favor an equalization of shipping charges.

The rates to shippers in this district would be increased as high as 25 per cent if the tariffs, proposed by the manufacturers, become effective.

Donley's Report.

In a report to the local chamber, Donley declares that 1,300 pages of typewritten records and 114 exhibits have been submitted at the hearing, which is only about two-thirds finished. The report continues:

"The opening statement of the general counsel for the railroads was to the effect that they were starting on an adventure rather than into a fight; that they would endeavor to put before the commission all of the facts and to show them just what the actual rate situation is, both with reference to levels and relationships.

"There are hundreds of interesting local and general conditions that have been involved, and of which we have made a thorough record, but do not think they would be interesting reading for our clients if we could get down all of these details.

"It can probably be summmed up by stating that the points that are to be decided are, first, whether we should have a strict mileage scale between each to and from point; second, mileage rates between origin and destination groups; third, comparative level of rates between C. F. A. and trunk line territory; fourth, the relationship between class rates in trunk line territory; fifth, level of rates for branch and lateral lines, short line railroads.

"As the carriers are taking the position that they do not have to justify any of their proposals or suggestions it will mean more work for the shippers in bringing in evidence to show the inequalities of proposals which the carriers have made. It is expected an adjournment will be declared for two or three weeks to give shippers an opportunity to study the carriers' evidence and then resume for the purpose of cross examination of their witnesses."

"The evidence of the railroads which has been put in so far has shown existing and proposed rates throughout the entire official classification territory. It shows present and proposed rates for local and long distance groups; intra-territorial and between three general territories; grouping for the eastern ports; also for the 'arbitrary' territory in the north and south portions of trunk line territory; in fact, the data covers all of the territory involved except the so called 'margin' district which is the border between trunk line and C. F. A. territory. Announcement was made by the railroads near the end of the first session of hearing that they were working on some proposals for rates in this district but admitted it was a proposition on which it was very difficult to make up their minds.

"An entirely new method of arriving at group mileage rates in trunk line territory was put forth. This is quite technical and will require great deal of study to determine just how its application will effect the general lines of commerce.

"The lines serving the Virginia cities and southern part of official classification territory are holding out for their usual differentials for branch line rates. Detailed testimony has been given by witnesses for the Long Island railroad and other eastern railroads to show what their idea of the proposed adjustments should be.

Voluminous Records.

Peritonitis In Children May Result In Convulsions

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND.

LINING the abdominal cavity and reflected upon the loops of intestines to furnish them with a delicate covering, is the thin, shiny, transparent tissue called the peritoneum.

This structure contains blood vessels and glands. Thin as it is, it is capable of having serious diseases. One such is known as peritonitis—inflamaton of the peritoneal membrane.

This disease is met at all ages. It is more common in grown persons, but it does attack children, even new-born babes. As a matter of experience, most of the cases in childhood occur during the first few weeks of life.

There are a lot of causes for peritonitis, but in the last analysis an infection of some sort can be discovered. A serious burn a bad fall or a blow may be followed by inflammation of the peritoneum.

In children, as in grown people, appendicitis may be complicated by peritonitis. Likewise, severe dysentery may produce such congestion of the intestines as to open the way for an infection of the peritoneum.

Septic sore throat may release so many pus-producing germs that the child may have peritonitis following the throat attack. Pneumonia, pleurisy and certain heart and brain disturbances may produce peritoneal complications.

Peritonitis begins with vomiting, high fever and pain. The abdomen becomes terribly swollen and hard to the touch. The child lies on the back with the knees drawn up to take the pressure off the swollen and painful abdomen. Sometimes a convulsion may be the first symptom.

Usually the comfort of the little patient can be promoted by the application of cold compresses to the swollen abdomen. A thin and not too heavy ice bag will help.

Sometimes the child will not tolerate cold. He may scream and give every evidence of increased discomfort. In such a case do not hesitate to substitute heat. Hot applications, particularly hot turpentine stupes, will help. Add a few drops of turpentine to a pan of hot water. Wring towels out of this and apply, hot as can be borne and cover with a dry towel.

Feeding will be difficult. Perhaps buttermilk can be retained. Perhaps milk acidified with a few drops of lemon juice will be acceptable.

The doctor will take charge of the little sufferer and prescribe the remedies.

RESUME RAIL RATE HEARING MONDAY, MAR. 30

Pottery Manufacturers Oppose Increase In Charges

EYES ON FIGHT

Charles F. Donley, Traffic Counselor, Submits Report.

Hearings on the application of the railroads of the country for permission to increase rates east of the Mississippi river, which move is being protested by the local Chamber of Commerce, will be resumed on Monday, March 30.

Charles F. Donley, Pittsburgh traffic counselor, is representing the Chamber of Commerce and the United States Potters association at the hearing. Local manufacturers are opposing the increased freight rates but favor an equalization of shipping charges.

The rates to shippers in this district would be increased as high as 25 per cent if the tariffs, proposed by the manufacturers, become effective.

Donley's Report.

In a report to the local chamber, Donley declares that 1,300 pages of typewritten records and 114 exhibits have been submitted at the hearing which is only about two-thirds finished. The report continues:

"The opening statement of the general counsel for the railroads was to the effect that they were starting on an adventure rather than into a fight; that they would endeavor to put before the commission all of the facts and to show them just what the actual rate situation is, both with reference to levels and relationships.

"There are hundreds of interesting local and general conditions that have been involved, and of which we have made a thorough record, but do not think they would be interesting reading for our clients if we could set down all of these details.

"It can probably be summed up by stating that the points that are to be decided are, first, whether we should have a strict mileage scale between each to and from point; second, mileage rates between origin and destination groups; third, comparative level of rates between C. F. A. and trunk line territory; fourth, the relationship between class rates in trunk line territory; fifth, level of rates for branch and lateral lines, short line railroads.

"As the carriers are taking the position that they do not have to justify any of their proposals or suggestions it will mean more work for the shippers in bringing in evidence to show the inequalities of proposals which the carriers have made. It is expected an adjournment will be declared for two or three weeks to give shippers an opportunity to study the carriers' evidence and then resume for the purpose of cross examination of their witnesses."

"The evidence of the railroad which has been put in so far has shown existing and proposed rates throughout the entire official classification territory. It shows present and proposed rates for local and long distance groups; intra territorial and between three general territories; grouping for the eastern ports; also for the 'arbitrary' territory in the north and south portions of trunk line territory; in fact, the data covers all of the territory involved except the so called 'margin' district which is the border between trunk line and C. F. A. territory. Announcement was made by the railroads near the end of the first session of hearing that they were working on some proposals for rates in this district but admitted it was a proposition on which it was very difficult to make up their minds.

"An entirely new method of arriving at group mileage rates in trunk line territory was put forth. This is quite technical and will require great deal of study to determine just how its application will effect the general lines of commerce.

"The lines serving the Virginia cities and southern part of official classification territory are holding out for their usual differentials for branch line rates. Detailed testimony has been given by witnesses for the Long Island railroad and other eastern railroads to show what their idea of the proposed adjustments should be.

Voluminous Records.

"Voluminous records have been made to show that the rates should be higher in the trunk line than in Central Freight association territory. So far as can be determined there has not been any good reason advanced as to why the intra-territorial, that is Central Freight association to trunk line, or New York to Chicago, or the reverse direction rates, should be increased, except the mathematical formula of scaling these rates to conform to certain rate standards.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Platinum Not for Brunettes.

Susan Ricker Knox, portrait painter, in discussing jewelry for women has advised blondes to wear platinum and brunettes to stick to gold. Platinum is too "cold" for most brunettes, she said, though it is just the thing for the average blonde who wears costly rings. The brunette having more pigment in her skin coloring is advised to wear gold as being "warmer." Green gold is not suitable for the brunette, she maintains.

Platinum Not for Brunettes.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

COUNTY SCHOOL TEACHERS MEET

Dr. J. V. McMillan, Miami University, Delivers Chief Address.

"School should reflect the best and highest ideals of life," declared Dr. J. V. McMillan, of the teachers' college, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, during an address delivered in the David Anderson high school, Lisbon, Saturday, as a feature of the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Teachers' association.

Dr. McMillan delivered two addresses, one in the morning and another in the afternoon. During his morning address Dr. McMillan referred to the philosophy of life as it has to do with teaching, and in the afternoon his main reference was to details.

"The problems of course of study, of method and of ideals must find their setting in real life at its best." Dr. McMillan went on to say. "We can discover the elements of real life only by contact with real life situations. The chief life values are health, preparation to earn a living; social, civic and moral power; home making and culture and enjoyment.

"These can be realized only by making use of the activities of the learner. If children were left to themselves, they would play, observe things about them and then express themselves in various ways and communicate with each other.

"These in their social setting constitute the capital upon which the teacher can build.

"These are the days when we should break away from the books to get the real things of life. Learn to know your neighborhood. Inculcate the observing and historic spirit. Children must be observing and infering. Give them interest in something that they can find an outlet. Children should be taught to construct things, not only with their hands, but with their mind.

"If you make a mistake in correcting a child, apologize when you find you are in error and you will find yourself a bigger, better person for so doing."

Departmental sessions began at 1:45 o'clock Saturday morning and continued throughout the day.

At the joint meeting of the boards of education of the various townships in the county, County Health Commissioner Dr. T. T. Church dwelt at length upon the health conditions presented by some of the rural school buildings, which in some instances he declared were not of the best.

Dr. Church called the attention of the board members to the possibility of impure drinking water, the condition of lavatories, and the lack of other necessary conveniences about the school buildings and school yards.

"In order to have better health conditions among the young of our rural community, we must have the wholehearted support of those in charge of these buildings," Dr. Church suggested.

The annual meeting was presided over by E. P. Stonebraker, superintendent of the Leetonia schools. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. W. E. Wilton, pastor of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church.

"Faith of Our Fathers," was the opening hymn, the singing being in charge of Miss Mary Albright, director of music of the Lisbon schools.

Over 200 teachers attended this meeting, the attendance being somewhat larger than the record of a year ago.

The score was 44 to 1, as it happened that practically all the varsity players and subs are members of the Gradatim society. A Romance of the Spanish Main — CAPTAIN BLOOD — by RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyrighted, 1922, by Rafael Sabatini.

"CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Vitagraph picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

SYNOPSIS.

Peter Blood, a young Irish physician, is wrongly condemned as a rebel against King James and is deported to Bridgetown in Barbadoes. There he is purchased as a slave by Colonel Bishop, military commander, at the behest of Arabella, the Colonel's niece. A Spanish galleon, the Cinco Llagas, under command of Don Diego de Espinosa y Valdez, captures the city. While the Spaniards sack the city, Blood sends Mary and Arabella back of the city to safety. He leads his fellow rebels-convict on board the ship and captures it. Colonel Bishop goes on board and Blood holds the military commander as hostage while the ship puts out of port and sends Bishop over the gangplank. Don Diego, taken prisoner, is told by Blood to sail the ship to Curacao, a Dutch settlement, in return for his liberty. Jeremy Pitt, who had studied navigation, suspects Don Diego is betraying them.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Now to the seas of the Spanish Main and to the ways of the adventurers who sailed it, Captain Blood still entertained illusions. But the next dawn was to shatter them rudely and for ever.

Coming on deck before the sun was up, he saw land ahead, as the Spaniard had promised them last night.

Beating out aweather, against the gentle landward breeze he be-

"Will I say a prayer for your soul?"

held a great ship on their starboard bow, that he conceived to be some three or four miles off, and—as well as he could judge her at that distance—of a tonnage equal if not superior to their own. Even as he watched her she altered her course, and going about came heading toward them, close hauled.

"There," said a soft voice behind him in liquid Spanish, "is the Promised Land, Don Pedro."

He turned sharply to face Don Diego, so sharply that the sly smile was not effaced from the Spaniard's coutenance before Captain Blood's eyes had flashed upon it.

"What land is that?" he demanded. "Will you have the effrontery to tell me that is the coast of Curacao. That land, you treacherous, forsworn Spanish dog, is the island of Hispaniola."

"Ah, perro ingles! You know too much," he said under his breath, and sprang for the Captain's throat.

Tight-locked in each other's arms they swayed a moment, then together they went down upon the deck, the Spaniard's feet jerked from under him by the right leg of Captain Blood. The Spaniard had depended upon choking the life out of Blood, and so gaining the half-hour that might be necessary to bring up that fine ship that was beating towards them. But all that Don Diego had accomplished was to betray himself completely.

"Will I say a prayer for your dirty soul now, whilst I am in this position?" Captain Blood was furiously mocking him.

"Who will pray for your soul, I wonder, when that galleon comes to lie board and board with you? Do you know what ship it is? It is the Encarnacion, the flagship of Don Miguel de Espinosa, the Lord Admiral of Castile, and Don Miguel is my brother. It is a very fortunate encounter. The Almighty, you see, watches over the destinies of Catholic Spain."

There was no trace of humor or urbanity now in Captain Blood. His light eyes blazed: his face was set.

He rose, relinquishing the Spaniard to his men. "Make him fast," he bade them. "Truss him, wrist and heel, but don't hurt him—not so much as a hair of his precious head."

Captain Blood regarded him steadily out of a face which, if impassive, had paled under its deep tan. About the prisoner, clamant, infuriated, ferocious, the rebels-convict surged, almost literally "athirst for his blood."

"Wait," Captain Blood imperiously commanded, and turning on his heel, he went aside to the rail. As he stood there deep in thought, he was joined by Hagthorpe, Wolverstone, and Ogle the gunner. In silence they stared with him across the water at that other ship.

"In less than half-an-hour," said Blood presently, "we shall have her athwart our hawse, sweeping our decks with her guns."

"We can fight," said the one-eyed giant with an oath.

"Fight!" sneered Blood. "Undermanned as we are, mustering a bare twenty men, in what case are we to fight? No, there would be only one way. To persuade her that all is well aboard, that we are Spaniards, so that she may leave us to continue on our course."

Ogle, with a bent for sarcasm, interposed a suggestion bitterly.

"We might send Don Diego de Espinosa in a boat manned by his Spaniards to assure his brother the Admiral that we are all loyal subjects of his Catholic Majesty."

"Bedad! ye've said it. He doesn't fear death, this damned pirate; but his son may take a different view. Filial piety's mighty strong in Spain." He swung on his heel abruptly, and strode back to the knot of men about his prisoner. "Here!" he shouted to them. "Bring him below."

In the ward-room the three stern chasers were in position, loaded, their muzzles thrusting through the open ports, precisely as the Spanish gunners had left them.

"Here, Ogle, is work for you," said Blood, and as the burly gunner came thrusting forward through the throng of gaping men, Blood pointed to the middle chaser: "Have that gun hauled back," he ordered.

When this was done, Blood beckoned those who held Don Diego.

"Lash him across the mouth of it," he bade them, and whilst, assisted by another two, they made haste to obey, he turned to the others. "To the roundhouse, some of you, and fetch the Spanish prisoners. And you, Dyke, go up and bid them set the flag of Spain aloft."

Don Diego, with his body stretched in an arc across the cannon's mouth, legs and arms lashed to the carriage on either side of it, eyeballs rolling in his head, glared maniacally at Captain Blood. A man may not fear to die, and yet be appalled by the form in which death comes to him.

Captain Blood vouchsafed him a malignant smile, before he turned to meet the fifteen manacled Spanish prisoners. From amongst them a comely, olive-skinned stripling, distinguished in bearing and apparel from his companions, started forward with an anguished cry of "Father!"

Writhing in the arms that made haste to seize and hold him, he called upon heaven and hell to avert this horror, and lastly, addressed to Captain Blood an appeal for mercy that was at once fierce and piteous.

Recovering the cynicism in which he had approached his task, the cynicism essential to its proper performance, Blood commanded Ogle to kindle a match and remove the leaden apron from the touch-hole of the gun that bore Don Diego. Then, as the younger Espinosa broke into intercessions mingled with imprecations, he wheeled upon him sharply.

"Peace!" he snapped. "It is your father's treachery that has brought us into this plight and deliberately into risk of capture and death aboard that ship of Spain. Just as your father recognized his brother's flagship, so will his brother have recognized the Cinco Llagas. So far, then, all is well. But presently the Encarnacion will be sufficiently close to perceive that here all is not as it should be. Sooner or later, she must guess or discover what is wrong, and then she will open fire or lay us board and board. Understand this clearly: to the first shot from the Encarnacion this gun will fire the answer. I make myself clear, I hope?"

"But, name of God, how should it be clear," young Espinosa cried. "Can you avert the fight? If you know a way, and if I, or these, can help you to it in Heaven's name let me hear it."

COUNTY SCHOOL TEACHERS MEET

Dr. J. V. McMillan, Miami University, Delivers Chief Address.

"School should reflect the best and highest ideals of life," declared Dr. J. V. McMillan, of the teachers' college, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, during an address delivered in the David Anderson high school, Lisbon, Saturday, as a feature of the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Teachers' association.

Dr. McMillan delivered two addresses, one in the morning and another in the afternoon. During his morning address Dr. McMillan referred to the philosophy of life as it has to do with teaching, and in the afternoon his main reference was to details.

"The problems of course of study, of method and of ideals must find their setting in real life at its best." Dr. McMillan went on to say. "We can discover the elements of real life only by contact with real life situations. The chief life values are health, preparation to earn a living; social, civic and moral power; home making and culture and enjoyment.

"These can be realized only by making use of the activities of the learner. If children were left to themselves, they would play, observe things about them and then express themselves in various ways and communicate with each other.

"These in their social setting constitute the capital upon which the teacher can build.

"These are the days when we should break away from the books to get the real things of life. Learn to know your neighborhood. Inculcate the observing and historic spirit. Children must be observing and infering. Give them interest in something that they can find an outlet. Children should be taught to construct things, not only with their hands, but with their mind.

"If you make a mistake in correcting a child, apologize when you find you are in error and you will find yourself a bigger, better person for so doing."

Departmental sessions began at 1:45 o'clock Saturday morning and continued throughout the day.

At the joint meeting of the boards of education of the various townships in the county, County Health Commissioner Dr. T. T. Church dwelt at length upon the health conditions presented by some of the rural school buildings, which in some instances he declared were not of the best.

Dr. Church called the attention of the board members to the possibility of impure drinking water, the condition of lavatories, and the lack of other necessary conveniences about the school buildings and school yards.

"In order to have better health conditions among the young of our rural community, we must have the wholehearted support of those in charge of these buildings," Dr. Church suggested.

The annual meeting was presided over by E. P. Stonebraker, superintendent of the Leetonia schools. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. W. E. Wilton, pastor of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church.

"Faith of Our Fathers," was the opening hymn, the singing being in charge of Miss Mary Albright, director of music of the Lisbon schools.

Over 200 teachers attended this meeting, the attendance being somewhat larger than the record of a year ago.

Down starred for the winners, making most of the points, while Brown and Burkle were the Anabasis' best players. The proceeds of the game were given to the auditorium "Curtain Fund."

But all that Don Diego had accomplished was to betray himself completely.

"Will I say a prayer for your dirty soul now, whilst I am in this position?" Captain Blood was furiously mocking him.

"Who will pray for your soul, I wonder, when that galleon comes to lie board and board with you? Do you know what ship it is? Captain Blood regarded him steadily out of a face which, if impassive, had paled under its deep tan. About the prisoner, clamant, infuriated, ferocious, the rebels-convict surged, almost literally "athirst for his blood."

"Wait," Captain Blood imperiously commanded, and turning on his heel, he went aside to the rail. As he stood there deep in thought, he was joined by Hagthorpe, Wolverstone, and Ogle the gunner. In silence they stared with him across the water at that other ship.

"In less than half an-hour," said Blood presently, "we shall have her athwart our hawse, sweeping our decks with her guns."

"We can fight," said the one-eyed giant with an oath.

"Fight!" sneered Blood. "Undermanned as we are, mustering a bare twenty men, in what case are we to fight? No, there would be only one way. To persuade her that all is well aboard, that we are Spaniards, so that she may leave us to continue on our course."

Ogle, with a bent for sarcasm, interposed a suggestion bitterly.

"We might send Don Diego de Espinosa in a boat manned by his Spaniards to assure his brother the Admiral that we are all loyal subjects of his Catholic Majesty."

"Bedad! ye've said it. He doesn't fear death, this damned pirate; but his son may take a different view. Filial piety's mighty strong in Spain." He swung on his heel abruptly, and strode back to the knot of men about his prisoner. "Here!" he shouted to them. "Bring him below."

In the ward-room the three stern chasers were in position, loaded, their muzzles thrusting through the open ports, precisely as the Spanish gunners had left them.

"Here, Ogle, is work for you," said Blood, and as the burly gunner came thrusting forward through the throng of gaping men, Blood pointed to the middle chaser: "Have that gun hauled back," he ordered.

When this was done, Blood beckoned those who held Don Diego.

"Lash him across the mouth of it," he bade them, and whilst, assisted by another two, they made haste to obey, he turned to the others. "To the roundhouse, some of you, and fetch the Spanish prisoners. And you, Dyke, go up and bid them set the flag of Spain aloft."

Don Diego, with his body stretched in an arc across the cannon's mouth, legs and arms lashed to the carriage on either side of it, eyeballs rolling in his head, glared maniacally at Captain Blood. A man may not fear to die, and yet be appalled by the form in which death comes to him.

Captain Blood vouchsafed him a malignant smile, before he turned to meet the fifteen manacled Spanish prisoners. From amongst them a comely, olive-skinned stripling, distinguished in bearing and apparel from his companions, started forward with an anguished cry of "Father!"

Writhing in the arms that made haste to seize and hold him, he called upon heaven and hell to avert this horror, and lastly, addressed to Captain Blood an appeal for mercy that was at once fierce and piteous.

Recovering the cynicism in which he had approached his task, the cynicism essential to its proper performance, Blood commanded Ogle to kindle a match and remove the leaden apron from the touch-hole of the gun that bore Don Diego. Then, as the younger Espinosa broke into intercessions mingled with imprecations, he wheeled upon him sharply.

"Peace!" he snapped. "It is your father's treachery that has brought us into this plight and deliberately into risk of capture and death aboard that ship of Spain. Just as your father recognized his brother's flagship, so will his brother have recognized the Cinco Llagas. So far, then, all is well. But presently the Encarnacion will be sufficiently close to perceive that here all is not as it should be. Sooner or later, she must guess or discover what is wrong, and then she will open fire or lay us board and board. Understand this clearly: to the first shot from the Encarnacion this gun will fire the answer. I make myself clear, I hope?"

"But, name of God, how should it be clear," young Espinosa cried. "Can you avert the fight? If you know a way, and if I, or these, can help you to it in Heaven's name let me hear it."

CHECKED THE WEAKNESS OF OLD AGE

This Man Began to Forget His Age in the New Vigor

"World's Tonic is certainly a boon to aged people. When the fires of life burn low in an old man he is subject to all kinds of discomfort. I just felt miserable until I began on World's Tonic. My stomach was unreliable, and I had trouble in sleeping.

"One bottle made me feel ten years younger. My digestion improved at once, and I began to sleep like a baby. I felt better in every way, and began to forget that I was 72. Since then I have gained strength until I am more like a man of fifty."

GEORGE PYER,
Odd Fellows' Building, East Liverpool, O.

Literally thousands of old people arrest the march of time with World's Tonic. This wonderful medicine so tones up the system that the infirmities of age disappear. The body is enabled to throw off all impurities, catarrhal troubles disappear, digestion is improved and vigor and strength are increased.

Grandaddy Jim.

Grandaddy Jim—I would sing you a hymn
Built on the praises of Grandaddy Jim—
Grandaddy Jim with his grey shock of hair,
Loitering there in his wreck of a chair;
Grandaddy Jim with his stories to tell.
Gone—yes, but oh, I remember him well.
Kindly and true is the story of him.
Ev'ry one loved him so—Grandaddy Jim.

Weathered and old were the yarns told to me,
Just a wee lad, on his rheumatic knee.
Calendars say that was long years gone by;
I don't believe it so; seems now that I
Heard them all yesterday, tales sweet and old,
Mystic and quaint that his feeble lips told.
Whiskered and aged and feeble of limb,
Oh, but his heart was young—Grandaddy Jim.
Sunshine just seemed to encircle his chair
Like it was proud to be lingering there
Close to the soul of him. Then, after while,
He went away, and the skies seemed to smile,
Happy to think he was coming along,
Coming to stay with his smile and his song.
Days when the sun's beaming over the rim
Seems like he smiles at me—Grandaddy Jim.

Cupid on Vacation.

STEUBENVILLE, March — Cupid seems to have deserted this section of Ohio, county officials reporting dog licenses in greater demand than marriage licenses. During one week this month, only two licenses were issued in Jefferson county and one in Harrison, while in Monroe only three were issued during all of February. Each county reported several hundred dog licenses issued during the same periods.

Japs Consider Extensive Plans to Encourage Korean Industry

Governor-general Saito Urges That Nation Plant 1,000,000 Acres of Farm Lands.

TOKYO, March—Extensive schemes for the development of agriculture and the encouragement of industry in Korea are under consideration by the Japanese government, according to Baron Minoru Saito, governor general of Korea, who is now in Tokyo pressing the claims of his territory before the imperial diet.

The chief feature of the plans which Baron Saito is sponsoring involves government subsidies sufficient to make possible the development of approximately 1,000,000 acres of land for rice culture. It is estimated that nearly 40,000,000 bushels of rice could be produced annually on this land.

The Japanese government already is assisting agriculture in Korea to the extent of about $350,000 annually but, according to Baron Saito, this is far from enough. If the plan he proposes is adopted, Baron Saito declares, Japan can get enough rice from Korea to be virtually independent of other countries. As things now are Japan is compelled to import millions of bushels of rice annually to meet the demands of her home market.

Plan Worked Out.

Under the plan now being considered, a comprehensive development program would be outlined and followed over a period of about ten years. Baron Saito estimates that within that time it would be possible to put under cultivation virtually all the land in Korea that is suitable for rice growing and insure maximum production for the country.

But for the earthquake of September, 1923, and the subsequent economic depression in Japan, the Korean development work already would have been undertaken by the government, Baron Saito believes.

With the prospect of normal prosperity returning to Japan at an early date, the governor general of Korea is confident funds will soon be available for carrying out his scheme.

Aside from rice growing, silk culture is becoming increasingly popular and profitable in Korea, according to Baron Saito. The silk cocoons are better than those grown in Japan and the Korean climate more suitable to silk growing, he says, than is that of Japan.

Need Railroads.

Industrially the chief need of Korea, the governor general declares, is railroads. In all the country there are only about 1,500 miles of railway lines and at least twice that mileage is needed to give the country adequate rail transportation facilities.

Given better transportation, Baron Saito believes, factories would be established and general industrial development of Korea would follow. There are no government plans as yet for railway building and private capital, Baron Saito says, is needed for these enterprises.

Politically, Baron Saito admitted, there is considerable unrest in Korea. Radical elements, financed, according to the governor general, from outside sources, are active and have obtained an appreciable foothold among the people. More efficient laws for the suppression of seditious activities, Baron Saito believes, are needed.

Father Freed.

MIDDLEPORT, March — Ed Snyder of Pityme was arrested and brought here on the charge of giving his ten-year-old son whisky in sweetened water. Officers who brought the child in said he was drunk on some intoxicant. The father was discharged later because of lack of evidence, it was claimed.

Queen Gives Her Favorite Brooch to Mrs. Kellogg

LONDON, March—Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, wife of the secretary of state of the United States, can display a gift from Queen Mary of England.

Just before Mrs. Kellogg left London she received a small box from Buckingham Palace. Enclosed therein was a note in the Queen's own handwriting, asking her to accept a quaint brooch, containing three big amethysts and a pearl. This brooch has been worn almost constantly for years by the Queen and was one of her favorite jewels. The gift of it to Mrs. Kellogg was a mark of high personal regard from the Queen.

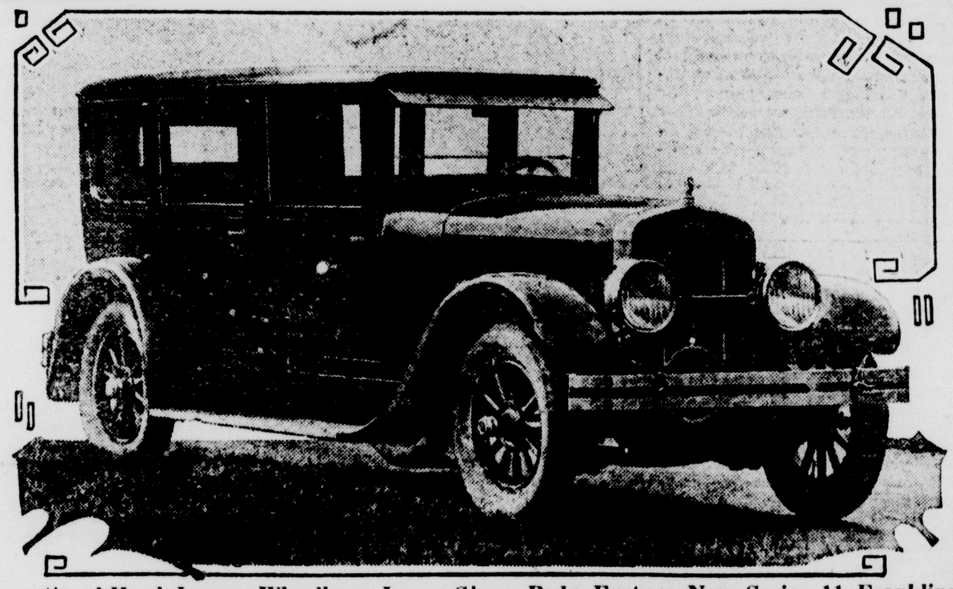
THE REVIEW-TRIBUNE



Conventional Hood, Longer Wheelbase, Lower Slung Body Feature New Series 11 Franklins

New Franklin Radically Changed in Appearance

As Styled by de Causse Franklin Now Has Custom Effect Entirely New to American Design—Seven Types, Conservative and Conventional, Being Displayed by the Buckeye Motor Co.

Franklin has done the unexpected. This is the concensus of opinion among those who have seen the new designs, styled by de Causse, on public display this week for the first time by the Buckeye Motor company, corner Sixth and Walnut streets.

From the point of view of the man in the street, the most striking thing about them is the radical way in which they differ from anything that Franklin has ever produced in the past. Until he looks at the hubcaps or insignia, the average man will not be able to say even whether the cars were made here or abroad.

The changes which first strike the eye are those in the hood. The straight radiator effect of entirely new lines and proportions now replaces the old inclined grille and rounded hood contour, which has been peculiar to Franklin for years. The wheelbase has been lengthened and frame lowered, bringing the body three inches nearer the ground.

From the point of view of the motor car designer, the cars have a custom look throughout, which also reflects certain foreign style elements. This is explained by the fact that the pattern cars were actually custom built by de Causse, and first shown by him at America's custom body builders' show at the Commodore Salon in New York a year ago. These models cost $10,000 each to build. At the Salon they made such an impression that they were given the most prominent location on the floor.

Beautiful Radiator Effect.

The designer, de Causse, is a motor car stylist of international reputation. He has been responsible for some of the most famed and most exclusive European cars, and in America, has done custom work for practically all of the manufacturers of high-priced cars.

An effect which is both entirely individual and fine appearing, is produced by the head-on view of the hood with its broad nickeled radiator shell having flat nickel bars, three in number, extending down the front and terminating at the bottom in a circle of the same material.

Custom Style Features

Numerous style features are introduced in the bodies which have not been seen before in anything but made-to-order cars. Over-all height has been noticeably reduced, yet head room and ground clearance remain the same. Fenders are crowned and beautifully molded. All this adds tremendously to the good appearance of the car.

An important influence on the final result is the latitude which the designer had in making all the elements in car construction, such as headlights, bumpers, size of wheels and even shape of hub-caps, contribute to the style effect.

Seven types are available: five enclosed —Sedan, Sport Sedan, Coupe, Cabriolet and Enclosed-Drive Limousine; and the Touring and Sport Runabout. Of these the Sport Sedan, Cabriolet and Sport Runabout are new to the Franklin line, and the Coupe is radically different.

Striking New Note in Open Cars

The two open cars are a distinct departure from ordinary open car standards in America, the purpose being to furnish a Touring and Runabout which both in style requirements and in power performance will cater to the most exacting and discriminating motorist.

Sport car details never before seen here are incorporated, illustrative of these being the English hoopstick construction for the top, with its highly polished, nickel-mounted bows and fine drab Burbank material. The Touring is finished in moleskin gray-green, and the Runabout in silver gray. The sweeping rear contour of the Runabout is another detail wholly new to America.

High-Powered Chauffeur-Driven Car in Line

Foremost in interest among the closed cars is the Cabriolet—the latest in strictly chauffeur-driven cars, and the first noteworthy American response to the demand for a compact, agile, powerful town car of the highest quality. Paint and trim for this car are to order from a wide choice. Both in this car and in the Enclosed-Drive Limousine, two folding seats are provided to supplement the space for three which the rear seat offers.

The Coupe, distinguished by its companionable seat, broad enough for three, and by its English coach-boot construction at the rear, will also be found of interest. The interior is leather upholstered, and a special front-post construction gives the clearest possible view on all sides. Both this car and the Sport Sedan make use of the Landau leather rear quarter which adds such a rakish touch to the ensemble. The Sport Sedan has a smart luggage deck with polished guards.

Car Complete, Ready for Driver

Franklin has inaugurated the policy of providing equipment, spare tire and cover, all included in the catalog price. In other words, a customer at any point in the country buys a car ready for the road, at a uniform price, with only the tax and freight extra. Equipment includes front bumper, rear bumperettes, balloon tires, Watson Stabilators, stop-light, rear vision mirror, automatic windshield wiper, adjustable sun visor, Waltham clock, tire carrier and lock, spare tire and cover, oil gauge, ammeter.

Upholstery for the Sedan, Sport Sedan and Enclosed-Drive Limousine is 21 ounce finest quality broadcloth, stock-dyed and doeskin-finished. Windemere mountings are specified. Tan Beige, Marne Green and Franklin Blue are the colors used for the exterior. In all cases, shields and fenders are black. Body color is set off by a fine triple stripe—black edged with white.

The Series 11 Franklins incorporate the 49% power increase introduced in the previous model. The chassis incorporates some interesting new mechanical developements, related chiefly to the changes incident to the greater size and longer, lower-slung character of the new model.

Loitering there in his wreck of a chair;
Grandaddy Jim with his stories to tell.
Gone—yes, but oh, I remember him well.
Kindly and true is the story of him.
Ev'ry one loved him so—Grandaddy Jim.

Weathered and old were the yarns told to me,
Just a wee lad, on his rheumatic knee.
Calendars say that was long years gone by;
I don't believe it so; seems now that I
Heard them all yesterday, tales sweet and old,
Mystic and quaint that his feeble lips told.
Whiskered and aged and feeble of limb,
Oh, but his heart was young—Grandaddy Jim.
Sunshine just seemed to encircle his chair
Like it was proud to be lingering there
Close to the soul of him. Then, after while,
He went away, and the skies seemed to smile.
Happy to think he was coming along,
Coming to stay with his smile and his song.
Days when the sun's beaming over the rim

Cupid on Vacation.

STEUBENVILLE, March — Cupid seems to have deserted this section of Ohio, county officials reporting dog licenses in greater demand than marriage licenses. During one week this month, only two licenses were issued in Jefferson county and one in Harrison, while in Monroe only three were issued during all of February. Each county reported several hundred dog licenses issued during the same periods.

An Italian automobile plant recently bought $600,000 worth of American machine tools.

Japs Consider Extensive Plans to Encourage Korean Industry

Governor-general Saito Urges That Nation Plant 1,000,000 Acres of Farm Lands.

TOKYO, March—Extensive schemes for the development of agriculture and the encouragement of industry in Korea are under consideration by the Japanese government, according to Baron Minoru Saito, governor general of Korea, who is now in Tokyo pressing the claims of his territory before the imperial diet.

The chief feature of the plans which Baron Saito is sponsoring involves government subsidies sufficient to make possible the development of approximately 1,000,000 acres of land for rice culture. It is estimated that nearly 40,000,000 bushels of rice could be produced annually on this land.

The Japanese government already is assisting agriculture in Korea to the extent of about $350,000 annually but, according to Baron Saito, this is far from enough. If the plan he proposes is adopted, Baron Saito declares, Japan can get enough rice from Korea to be virtually independent of other countries. As things now are Japan is compelled to import millions of bushels of rice annually to meet the demands of her home market.

Plan Worked Out.

Under the plan now being considered, a comprehensive development program would be outlined and followed over a period of about ten years. Baron Saito estimates that within that time it would be possible to put under cultivation virtually all the land in Korea that is suitable for rice growing and insure maximum production for the country.

But for the earthquake of September, 1923, and the subsequent economic depression in Japan, the Korean development work already would have been undertaken by the government, Baron Saito believes.

With the prospect of normal prosperity returning to Japan at an early date, the governor general of Korea is confident funds will soon be available for carrying out his scheme.

Aside from rice growing, silk culture is becoming increasingly popular and profitable in Korea, according to Baron Saito. The silk cocoons are better than those grown in Japan and the Korean climate more suitable to silk growing, he says, than is that of Japan.

Need Railroads.

Industrially the chief need of Korea, the governor general declares, is railroads. In all the country there are only about 1,500 miles of railway lines and at least twice that mileage is needed to give the country adequate rail transportation facilities.

Given better transportation, Baron Saito believes, factories would be established and general industrial development of Korea would follow. There are no government plans as yet for railway building and private capital, Baron Saito says, is needed for these enterprises.

Politically, Baron Saito admitted, there is considerable unrest in Korea. Radical elements, financed, according to the governor general, from outside sources, are active and have obtained an appreciable foothold among the people. More efficient laws for the suppression of seditious activities, Baron Saito believes, are needed.

Father Freed.

MIDDLEPORT, March — Ed Snyder of Pityme was arrested and brought here on the charge of giving his ten-year-old son whisky in sweetened water. Officers who brought the child in said he was drunk on some intoxicant. The father was discharged later because of lack of evidence, it was claimed.

Queen Gives Her Favorite Brooch to Mrs. Kellogg

LONDON, March—Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, wife of the secretary of state of the United States, can display a gift from Queen Mary of England.

Just before Mrs. Kellogg left London she received a small box from Buckingham Palace. Enclosed therein was a note in the Queen's own handwriting, asking her to accept a quaint brooch, containing three big amethysts and a pearl. This brooch has been worn almost constantly for years by the Queen and was one of her favorite jewels. The gift of it to Mrs. Kellogg was a mark of high personal regard from the Queen.

Conventional Hood, Longer Wheelbase, Lower Slung Body Feature New Series 11 Franklins

New Franklin Radically Changed in Appearance

As Styled by de Causse Franklin Now Has Custom Effect Entirely New to American Design—Seven Types, Conservative and Conventional, Being Displayed by the Buckeye Motor Co.

Franklin has done the unexpected. This is the concensus of opinion among those who have seen the new designs, styled by de Causse, on public display this week for the first time by the Buckeye Motor company, corner Sixth and Walnut streets.

From the point of view of the man in the street, the most striking thing about them is the radical way in which they differ from anything that Franklin has ever produced in the past. Until he looks at the hubcaps or insignia, the average man will not be able to say even whether the cars were made here or abroad.

The changes which first strike the eye are those in the hood. The straight radiator effect of entirely new lines and proportions now replaces the old inclined grille and rounded hood contour, which has been peculiar to Franklin for years. The wheelbase has been lengthened and frame lowered, bringing the body three inches nearer the ground.

From the point of view of the motor car designer, the cars have a custom look throughout, which also reflects certain foreign style elements. This is explained by the fact that the pattern cars were actually custom built by de Causse, and first shown by him at America's custom body builders' show at the Commodore Salon in New York a year ago. These models cost $10,000 each to build. At the Salon they made such an impression that they were given the most prominent location on the floor.

Beautiful Radiator Effect.

The designer, de Causse, is a motor car stylist of international reputation. He has been responsible for some of the most famed and most exclusive European cars, and in America, has done custom work for practically all of the manufacturers of high-priced cars.

An effect which is both entirely individual and fine appearing, is produced by the head-on view of the hood with its broad nickeled radiator shell having flat nickel bars, three in number, extending down the front and terminating at the bottom in a circle of the same material.

Custom Style Features

Numerous style features are introduced in the bodies which have not been seen before in anything but made-to-order cars. Over-all height has been noticeably reduced, yet head room and ground clearance remain the same. Fenders are crowned and beautifully molded. All this adds tremendously to the good appearance of the car.

An important influence on the final result is the latitude which the designer had in making all the elements in car construction, such as headlights, bumpers, size of wheels and even shape of hub caps, contribute to the style effect.

Seven types are available: five enclosed —Sedan, Sport Sedan, Coupe, Cabriolet and Enclosed-Drive Limousine; and the Touring and Sport Runabout. Of these the Sport Sedan, Cabriolet and Sport Runabout are new to the Franklin line, and the Coupe is radically different.

Striking New Note in Open Cars

The two open cars are a distinct departure from ordinary open car standards in America, the purpose being to furnish a Touring and Runabout which both in style requirements and in power performance will cater to the most exacting and discriminating motorist.

Sport car details never before seen here are incorporated, illustrative of these being the English hoopstick construction for the top, with its highly polished, nickel-mounted bows and fine drab Burbank material. The Touring is finished in moleskin gray-green, and the Runabout in silver gray. The sweeping rear contour of the Runabout is another detail wholly new to America.

High-Powered Chauffeur-Driven Car in Line

Foremost in interest among the closed cars is the Cabriolet—the latest in strictly chauffeur-driven cars, and the first noteworthy American response to the demand for a compact, agile, powerful town car of the highest quality. Paint and trim for this car are to order from a wide choice. Both in this car and in the Enclosed-Drive Limousine, two folding seats are provided to supplement the space for three which the rear seat offers.

The Coupe, distinguished by its companionable seat, broad enough for three, and by its English coach-boot construction at the rear, will also be found of interest. The interior is leather upholstered, and a special front-post construction gives the clearest possible view on all sides. Both this car and the Sport Sedan make use of the Landau leather rear quarter which adds such a rakish touch to the ensemble. The Sport Sedan has a smart luggage deck with polished guards.

Car Complete, Ready for Driver

Franklin has inaugurated the policy of providing equipment, spare tire and cover, all included in the catalog price. In other words, a customer at any point in the country buys a car ready for the road, at a uniform price, with only the tax and freight extra. Equipment includes front bumper, rear bumperettes, balloon tires, Watson Stabilators, stop-light, rear vision mirror, automatic windshield wiper, adjustable sun visor, Waltham clock, tire carrier and lock, spare tire and cover, oil gauge, ammeter.

Upholstery for the Sedan, Sport Sedan and Enclosed-Drive Limousine is 21 ounce finest quality broadcloth, stock-dyed and doeskin-finished. Windemere mountings are specified. Tan Beige, Marne Green and Franklin Blue are the colors used for the exterior. In all cases, shields and fenders are black. Body color is set off by a fine triple stripe—black edged with white.

The Series 11 Franklins incorporate the 49% power increase introduced in the previous model. The chassis incorporates some interesting new mechanical developements, related chiefly to the changes incident to the greater size and longer, lower-slung character of the new model.

RUM PIRATES AWE BRITISH, LOOT VESSEL

Navigator Tells How High-jackers Came Aboard.

WHISKY SEIZED

Cover Crew With Guns, Lock Captain in Room.

LONDON, March — American "rum pirates" out-pirate the pirates of the Spanish Main, if all that Captain J. T. Tweedie says of them is true.

Captain Tweedie is back in London after an adventuresome experience with pirates of "Rum Row" and hopes that he will never again have to encounter such pirates.

Tweedie says that he signed on the good ship Veronica at Bremen, as chief officer, with no intention of becoming a rum-runner, for articles of agreement were signed for a voyage to Melilla. While at sea orders were given to the ship to proceed to Bermuda, thence to a point 25 miles south of Montauk Point, New York.

Off Montauk a number of speed boats came out and took 4,500 cases of whisky ashore and then trouble began, Tweedie says.

"A representative of the promoters and another man came aboard to arrange for the purchase of the remainder of the cargo," Captain Tweedie said.

"The former individual asked what protection we could give him, and he was told we had three revolvers and one rifle.

"It was agreed that he should go ashore and charter a schooner to fetch the remainder of the cargo. Three days later a speed boat came alongside, and I received an individual who represented himself as a prospective buyer, and showed him to the captain's cabin. Another man came aboard, apparently sick, and I gave him some whisky and then went on deck to prepare to discharge the cargo.

"To my amazement I found myself covered by two guns and was ordered to put my hands up. The next thing I noticed was the crew were covered with nine guns directed from the pirates' boat. The captain and myself were locked and barred in the petty officers' mess room.

"After two days' imprisonment the pirate mate ordered me aft, where I met the pirate captain.

"'I want you to do something for me,' he said. 'You play a straight game with me and I will with you.'

"While I was taking a sight and working out the position of the ship the guns were fixed on me all the time.

"For six days we were cruising about waiting for a schooner to come. When it was sighted I was made a prisoner again. At night I was let out and ordered to help discharge cargo. Our crew was put to the same task, and working at the point of the revolver the whole time we got about 5,000 cases aboard the schooner, then she left us.

"Back to my prison I went, almost starving. The pirate mate then told me a revenue cutter had been sighted. 'You'll get two years the same as us,' he said, and I told him I wasn't sorry, for anything was better than what I was undergoing. For reasons I can only hint at the revenue cutter cleared off.

"Three days later a three-masted schooner came alongside and all hands were ordered into the hold to again discharge cargo. I was weak and the work soon exhausted me. All the sympathy I got was a kick. I tried to work, but fell. For that I was given a blow on the nose and lay streaming in blood, not caring if the pirates killed me. I don't know when the pirates left us, for I was still lying in the hold, bleeding profusely.

"I was hoisted out of the hold and on deck found a notice from the pirate captain telling us what course to take and adding: "I am going to follow you. We have a machine gun and will riddle the whole ship if you dare to disobey.' Our ship was in an awful state. The pirates had taken out the shafting of the engine, broken the compass and only left us sail power. Ill provisioned, and with our crew disillusioned, we were eventually picked up and towed into Halifax.

"No more rum pirates for me."

At the first sign of skin trouble apply Resinol

That patch of eruption is not necessarily a serious matter! Even in severe, well-established cases of eczema, ringworm or similar affections, Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap usually relieve the itching at once and quickly overcome the trouble completely. How much more, then, can this simple, inexpensive treatment be relied on to dispel skin troubles in their earlier stages.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For samples of each, free, write to Dept. 1-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

DeMille's "Golden Bed" Film Feature At Ceramic Theatre

That women, crazed for social position, will sometimes drag their husbands right into financial disaster, is a pont brought out by Cecil B. De Mille in his newest production for Paramount, "The Golden Bed," which will be shown four days, starting today at the Ceramic theatre.

Lillian Rich, the latest screen "discovery" to make a bid for stellar honors under De Mille, and Vera Reynolds whom that director brought into prominence in "Feet of Clay," play out a verbal duel, wage a battle of wits for social mastery. For once the men in the families are mere pawns in the game.

"The Golden Bed" was written for the screen by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel of the same name by Wallace Irwin. Rod La Docque has the leading man's role in the production. We first find him a struggling young candy maker who, by dint of hard work, becomes the owner of a large chain of stores.

Flora Lee Peake (Lillian Rich), hope of a poor but proud family who before young Holtz, played by La Rocque, had made his money wouldn't have anything to do with him, now sees a way to retrieve the family fortune—become Mrs. Holtz.

The other sister (Vera Reynolds), however, has been in love with Holtz from the very beginning and it is when she sees the possibility of losing him that the fun begins.

De Mille has made a picture of this Irwin novel that is going to prove more popular than anything he has ever attempted before, excepting, of course, "The Ten Commandments."

The three aforementioned players all have featured roles in the cast of the picture as have Warner Baxter, Theodore Kostloff and Julia Faye.

Here's a picture that affords De Mille every opportunity for beautiful women, spectacular scenes, gorgeous gowns and all the rest.

Mr. Allan Small, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I have always lived in fear of heart trouble—my father, as well as my mother's sister, died from this dreaded affliction when I was a child. As it was on both sides of my family and I had often heard it was hereditary, I lived in dread and fear

"As I have had at intervals severe abdominal pains, heart-burn and pressure on the heart, I felt there was no relief so I became reconciled to the horrible truth I was doomed, nothing could be done and must await my time to go as my father and mother's sister. I never dreamed I might only have intestinal indigestion, and my trouble was sour and acid stomach, causing gas pressure on the heart. Thanks to a friend who suggested Carter's Little Liver Pills as a remedy for faulty intes- final elimination, I am now free from the dreaded fear and enjoy all around good health. Small pills, easy to take and relieve the bowels in a rational way, with pleasant after effects." For sale at all druggists.

RUM PIRATES AWE BRITISH, LOOT VESSEL

WHISKY SEIZED

Cover Crew With Guns, Lock Captain in Room.

LONDON, March — American "rum pirates" outpirate the pirates of the Spanish Main, if all that Captain J. T. Tweedie says of them is true.

Captain Tweedie is back in London after an adventuresome experience with pirates of "Rum Row" and hopes that he will never again have to encounter such pirates.

Tweedie says that he signed on the good ship Veronica at Bremen, as chief officer, with no intention of becoming a rum-runner, for articles of agreement were signed for a voyage to Melilla. While at sea orders were given to the ship to proceed to Bermuda, thence to a point 25 miles south of Montauk Point, New York.

Off Montauk a number of speed boats came out and took 4,500 cases of whisky ashore and then trouble began, Tweedie says.

"A representative of the promoters and another man came aboard to arrange for the purchase of the remainder of the cargo," Captain Tweedie said.

"The former individual asked what protection we could give him, and he was told we had three revolvers and one rifle.

"It was agreed that he should go ashore and charter a schooner to fetch the remainder of the cargo. Three days later a speed boat came alongside, and I received an individual who represented himself as a prospective buyer, and showed him to the captain's cabin. Another man came aboard, apparently sick, and I gave him some whisky and then went on deck to prepare to discharge the cargo.

"To my amazement I found myself covered by two guns and was ordered to put my hands up. The next thing I noticed was the crew were covered with nine guns directed from the pirates' boat. The captain and myself were locked and barred in the petty officers' mess room.

"After two days' imprisonment the pirate mate ordered me aft, where I met the pirate captain.

"'I want you to do something for me,' he said. 'You play a straight game with me and I will with you.'

"While I was taking a sight and working out the position of the ship the guns were fixed on me all the time.

"For six days we were cruising about waiting for a schooner to come. When it was sighted I was made a prisoner again. At night I was let out and ordered to help discharge cargo. Our crew was put to the same task, and working at the point of the revolver the whole time we got about 5,000 cases aboard the schooner, then she left us.

"Back to my prison I went, almost starving. The pirate mate then told me a revenue cutter had been sighted. 'You'll get two years the same as us,' he said, and I told him I wasn't sorry, for anything was better than what I was undergoing. For reasons I can only hint at the revenue cutter cleared off.

"Three days later a three-masted schooner came alongside and all hands were ordered into the hold to again discharge cargo. I was weak and the work soon exhausted me. All the sympathy I got was a kick. I tried to work, but fell. For that I was given a blow on the nose and lay streaming in blood, not caring if the pirates killed me. I don't know when the pirates left us, for I was still lying in the hold, bleeding profusely.

"I was hoisted out of the hold and on deck found a notice from the pirate captain telling us what course to take and adding: "I am going to follow you. We have a machine gun and will riddle the whole ship if you dare to disobey.' Our ship was in an awful state. The pirates had taken out the shafting of the engine, broken the compass and only left us sail power. Ill provisioned, and with our crew disillusioned, we were eventually picked up and towed into Halifax.

At the first sign of skin trouble apply Resinol

That patch of eruption is not necessarily a serious matter! Even in severe, well-established cases of eczema, ringworm or similar affections, Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap usually relieve the itching at once and quickly overcome the trouble completely. How much more, then, can this simple, inexpensive treatment be relied on to dispel skin troubles in their earlier stages.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For samples of each, free, write to Dept. 1-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

DeMille's "Golden Bed" Film Feature At Ceramic Theatre

That women, crazed for social position, will sometimes drag their husbands right into financial disaster, is a point brought out by Cecil B. De Mille in his newest production for Paramount, "The Golden Bed," which will be shown four days, starting today at the Ceramic theatre.

Lillian Rich, the latest screen "discovery" to make a bid for stellar honors under De Mille, and Vera Reynolds whom that director brought into prominence in "Feet of Clay," play out a verbal duel, wage a battle of wits for social mastery. For once the men in the families are mere pawns in the game.

"The Golden Bed" was written for the screen by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel of the same name by Wallace Irwin. Rod La Docque has the leading man's role in the production. We first find him a struggling young candy maker who, by dint of hard work, becomes the owner of a large chain of stores.

Flora Lee Peake (Lillian Rich), hope of a poor but proud family who before young Holtz, played by La Rocque, had made his money wouldn't have anything to do with him, now sees a way to retrieve the family fortune—become Mrs. Holtz.

The other sister (Vera Reynolds), however, has been in love with Holtz from the very beginning and it is when she sees the possibility of losing him that the fun begins.

De Mille has made a picture of this Irwin novel that is going to prove more popular than anything he has ever attempted before, excepting, of course, "The Ten Commandments."

The three aforementioned players all have featured roles in the cast of the picture as have Warner Baxter, Theodore Kostloff and Julia Faye.

Here's a picture that affords De Mille every opportunity for beautiful women, spectacular scenes, gorgeous gowns and all the rest.

Mr. Allan Small, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I have always lived in fear of heart trouble—my father, as well as my mother's sister, died from this dreaded affliction when I was a child. As it was on both sides of my family and I had often heard it was hereditary, I lived in dread and fear.

"As I have had at intervals severe abdominal pains, heart-burn and pressure on the heart, I felt there was no relief so I became reconciled to the horrible truth I was doomed, nothing could be done and must await my time to go as my father and mother's sister. I never dreamed I might only have intestinal indigestion, and my trouble was sour and acid stomach, causing gas pressure on the heart. Thanks to a friend who suggested Carter's Little Liver Pills as a remedy for faulty intestinal elimination, I am now free from the dreaded fear and enjoy all around good health. Small pills, easy to take and relieve the bowels in a rational way, with pleasant after effects." For sale at all druggists.

WEST VIRGINIA MINISTER BOOSTS KA-DI-OK TO ALL

Says Remedy Gave Him Permanent Relief From Stomach Trouble After Six Years' Sufferings.

REV J. F. ELMORE,
West Charleston, W. Va.

Rev. J. F. Elmore, for the past 12 years in charge of the Adventist Church at West Charleston, W. Va., and for 13 years prior the pastor of a congregation at Clay, W. Va., his parsonage and home being at 1318 Crescent Road, is a self-avowed great booster for Ka-di-ok, the renowned herbal tonic and system toner, which is being so much talked about at present for its wonderful recuperating powers.

To the Ka-di-ok representative Rev. Mr. Elmore said he had suffered for the past six years excruciating misery with his stomach; that he barely kept himself alive by eating predigested foods and absorbing some of the tonics on the markets, and only obtained permanent relief until after he had taken Ka-di-ok.

"I read of Ka-di-ok while I was recovering from smallpox," said Rev. Elmore, "and I immediately procured some when I could get out. I gained from 195 to 210 pounds in a short while, I am now free from stomach trouble, sleep fine, I have no weakness like I had before, and I am a great booster for that medicine. I have been the means of a great number of people having purchased Ka-di-ok from what I have told them of my remarkable recovery."

Not only the reverend, but his good wife also sends in words of praise, not alone for what it did for her, but for the remarkable change in her husband's physical condition.

Ka-di-ok is sold and recommended in East Liverpool by Math-Cut Rate Medicine Store, 129 W. 6th street.

Despite Dull Outlook, Fletcher's Phillies Bristle With Hope

RUNYON SAYS

BY DAMON RUNYON.
Copyright, 1925, International News Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, March 16, 1925. This column is commencing to read like the one the writer compiled daily quite some years ago for the Pueblo Chieftain.

That was the title, "Personal Mention."

The writer, then a bustling young "cub" reporter, with a large notebook, went around and about the hotels and stores of Pueblo, finding out who was going away and where, and why; who was ill, and of what; who was visiting in the city and whom, and who had a new position, and what.

"The idea is to get the name of every person in this town in the paper every two or three months," said the city editor, a gentleman now, by the way, bald-headed, and married and living in Los Angeles.

It was interesting work. The most interesting part of it was the things the young reporter learned about people that he couldn't put in "Personal Mention." It afforded him excellent study in human nature.

The same reporter has learned a few things about people of your acquaintance out here in Los Angeles that he can't put in this "Personal Mention."

But only a few. Most everybody out here is happy, contented, doing well. That is what the writer likes best of all to chronicle—that someone is DOING WELL.

Let us see whom we have today.

MAURICE McLOUGHLIN, the most colorful, spectacular champion that ever swung a racket, is with Spalding's, in Los Angeles.

It doesn't take an old man to recall McLaughlin's first visit to New York. They may have been greater tennis players than McLoughlin. There has never been one of his dash, and fire, and human interest.

"DUTCH LEONARD, the American League lefthander, who figured in about four world's series, took the money he made in baseball and invested in fruit lands near Fresno. He has one of the showplaces of that region, welcomes all wayfarers hospitably, is accounted wealthy.

Donlin originally came from the coast. He was one of the most picturesque players ever in the game. His name is still as well remembered as if he were still playing. That, indeed, is FAME in baseball.

ADAM WALSH, Notre Dame center, the greatest center this writer ever saw, lives out here. His father has a grocery store in Hollywood. The football fans of Los Angeles are still talking of that Notre Dame backfield.

The baseball fans of Los Angeles say the best pitcher in the Pacific Coast league last season was Ol' Doc Otey Crandall, once of the Giants.

Crandall isn't so very old in years. But he has been called Ol' Doc so long he ACTS old. The writer gave him the title when Crandall was with the Giants. His significance is now rather vague. It was well understood at the time it was applied.

McGraw used Crandall almost exclusively as a relief pitcher. He was literally a doctor of disabled ball games. He was one of the few men the writer ever saw who had a real good slow ball and with it NERVE enough to put it up to a batter IN A PINCH.

That was mainly Crandall's success as a relief pitcher—his slow ball, and his NERVE.

He usually came in behind blinding speed that the opposition had suddenly ganged. The change from speed to Crandall's slow delivery stopped the slugging. He saved many ball games for McGraw.

The name "Ol' Doc" somehow fitted Crandall's personality. He was a thick-set, loggy-looking fellow, drawling of speech, of country aspect generally. He was a great hitter in streaks. McGraw often used him as a pinch hitter.

To hear them talk of the "Ol' Doc" out here you might think he is positively antique. He is probably still well under forty.

Crandall always took good care of himself. He drank about one glass of beer per year when he was with the Giants. He was drinking his annual glass glass in a Pittsburgh saloon after winning a tough game, one hot day, when McGraw walked in.

McGraw fined Crandall $100 for the ONE glass. McGraw believed in picking shining marks for his examples.

Other ball players out here who will be recalled by big league fans are Salida Tom Hughes, once of the Yankees and other clubs, and Truck Hannah, also once of the Yanks.

Nurmi Will Decide On Distance Races For Boston Games

BOSTON, March 16—The distance which Paavo Nurmi will run at the initial indoor games of the Boston Lodge of Elks at Mechanics' building, March 21, will be decided by Nurmi himself.

Hugo Quist, acting for Nurmi, has notified the athletic committee of the Elks that the great Finnish athlete would compete at any distance the management desires, but the management of the athletic committee wishes to have the Finn name his own distance.

Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star, has notified the committee that he will compete at any distance from one to three miles. Lloyd Hahn and other stars will compete against Nurmi and Ray.

Kearns, in New York, Listens to Offers For Dempsey Battle

NEW YORK, March 16—With Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, in New York, it was expected today that numerous offers would be made for a bout featuring the champion to be held in the late summer at an open air arena in this vicinity.

Charley Henderson, promoter of a Long Island stadium, conferred with Kearns but Kearns said no definite proposition was made to him. Jimmy De Forest, newly appointed matchmaker of the Polo ground A. C., was to meet with Kearns and elaborate on the offer of the "greatest sum Dempsey ever received for a bout." Tex Rickard also is expected to make an offer for Dempsey's services.

Veteran Marathon Runner to Compete In Boston Events

BOSTON, March 16—Clarence H. DeMar, veteran marathon runner of Melrose, has entered the annual marathon of the B. A. A. to be held April 19. DeMar has won the event three times and is anxious to make it four this year.

Walter Kimmick, ex-Red, Almost Certain to Land Second-base Berth; His Ability Pleases Philly Pilot.

By Davis J. Walsh.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 16—Once upon a time there was a group of worthy but altogether mediocre young men who suddenly recognized the fact that their manager had been born white, didn't spill egg on his vest and habitually washed behind the ears. They deemed him a gentleman and a scholar, went out of their earnest way to please him and live happily ever after.

This is not a bed time story. It is the story of the poor but honest Phillies, as outlined to the writer. The story of an almost hopeless inefficient ball club that fairly bristles with hope from Arthur Fletcher, the clean-eared manger, right on down to Heine Sand, the shortstop who didn't realize there was a lot of kidding going around and insisted that bearing down was one of the things that was being done these days.

The Phils, in short, may be going nowhere in particular, but they decline to do it quietly.

Sand, by the way, is one of comparatively few 1924 relics who figure to hold his job. Nelson "chicken" Hawks, once a Yankee, and later of Nashville, has replaced Holke at first base. Walter Kimmick, ex-Red, has moved right into second base from the Vernon Coast league club. A young man, C. B. Hober by name, and gifted by nature, will play third. He is up with the Phils from Beaumont and Fletcher thinks he will stay. Nothing personal behind this threat.

"He's the sweetest looking infielder I've seen in a long time," said Fletcher, referring to Kimmick. "He seems to be able to do anything at second base and I'll venture to say his hitting has improved fifty percent. He stands up there like Hornsby now."

Kimmick and Huber have eliminated Russell Wrightstone except for utility measures. Leland Durham, a semi-pro from Atlanta, Illinois, and Leonard Metz, from Waterbury, Conn., also are striving but no one seems to be the wiser. Horace Ford has retired to a life of ease and refinement.

There are plenty of outfielders and some of them are good. Cy Williams will adorn centerfield, leaving Harper, Mokan, Senultz and George Burns, the elder, to debate the remaining places.

The Phils also have many pitchers, so-called. The best of the lot are Jimmy Ring, Wilbur Hubbell, Hal Carlson, Clarence Mitchell, Walter Beetts and John Couch, veterans, and Dana Fillingim, back again from Beaumont; Oran O'Neal, from the same spot; Ray Pierce, from Topeka, and Frank Ulrich from Waterbury.

Mount Keeps Floor Squad

Mount Union college basketball team, winner of eleven straight games in the Ohio conference and generally heralded as conference champion, will be an even harder team to defeat next season. Every member of the present squad is available for next winter, Capt. Lefty Miller, center, and Bo Labor, forward, are juniors, and the other members, Wilcoxen, Bromby and Orin are sophomores.

That basketball relations between Ohio Wesleyan and Mount Union will be resumed next season is the hope of many conference followers. Mount was victorious over the Delaware team in the 1923-24 season, but the teams did not clash this year, Wesleyan ending as runnerup in percentage with twelve wins and one loss. The Ohio conference basketball schedule meeting is to be held at Columbus.

The new policy of the southern Ohio conference members, including Wesleyan, in first booking games between themselves before considering others, may complicate schedule making considerably this year. Western Reserve, though its prospects next year are not exceptional, will attempt to schedule a game with Mount Union at Cleveland.

Christians, Boulevards Cage Winners

Hand Losing Scores to First Presbyterians and Penn. Ave.

First Christian passers defeated the First Presbyterians, 27 to 24, and the Park Boulevards won as they pleased from the Penn. Ave. M. E., 39 to 18, in Sunday school league contests Saturday night at the "Y."

The opening clash of the evening was one of the best played games of the season. The contest was anybody's from start to finish, neither club having more than a six point lead at any stage of the engagement. Only in the last half minute did the Christians cinch the honors.

The Presbyterians led at the end of the first quarter, 8 to 4. But the Christians tied up the count at the half, when the score stood 12-12.

They were still deadlocked at the end of the third quarter, 15 to 15. In the final period the Christians found the basket and began to draw ahead. Seven points behind, the Presbyterians started a rally which put them within one point of the opposition, Hall, Allison and McVey registering field goals. Kilmer, however, caged the ball in the last half minute and gave the Christians a three-point margin. Hall, McVey and C. Allison were the Presbyterian stars. All the winners played good ball.

The Parks enjoyed a practice romp with their East End opponents, missing many shots in addition to what they made. Azdell, Guyton and McKee were the Boulevard stars, while McKim, Augelbright and Rose performed well for the losers.

SID JONES, FORMER LOCAL O. & P. SLAB STAR, TELLS OF HURLING DUEL IN 1911

Sid Jones, athletic coach at Warren high school, will never forget one afternoon in the midsummer of 1911.

Sid Jones at that time was a pitcher for the East Liverpool club in the O. & P. league, captained by Alex Sweeney, who also recalls vividly the afternoon in question. When the two met here recently, on the occasion of the visit of Warren's basketball team in the Ceramic City, they recalled the "good old days." Jones says:

"Though I endeavor to teach the boys of Warren how to play the pigskin game, my heart goes out to the diamond sport. I pitched for a few teams in the old O. & P. league and became acquainted with numerous baseball celebrities. Everett Scott, dean of major league shortstops, used to stop the hot shots between second and third in this organization.

"The particular game to which I am referring was played in midsummer in 1911. The contest was played at Youngstown and I was doing slab duty for East Liverpool. The teams were in fine fettle and the game gradually developed into a burling duel. That now ancient piece of baseball machinery, Earl Moseley, was sending up the shoots for the Steel City nine. The opposition manager to squeeze a marker across the plate and we tied the count an inning later.

"The duel for a run grew more and more intense and the crowd was constantly upon its feet as the battle breezed into the closing stanzas. The Youngstowners had nicked me for taree bingles during the course of the afternoon.

"The fatal ninth finally started. Moseley disposed of our batters and I trudged to the mound. The first batter fell a victim to my fast ball. The next hitsmith shared the same fate. The third sticker swaggered to the scoring station and leisurely swung his heavy bludgeon across the plate. I wrapped my frame into a series of complex knots and released the pellet. The batter sent the ball through our infield, but one of the inner workmen booted the chance and the batter was on second by virtue of an overthrow. He stole third and menaced our tie.

"The following slugger skied high to the outfield and it looked as though another inning would be necessary to decide the issue of the contest. But this is the time that fate stepped in and took a hand in the tide of battle. The outfielder, with a fairly easy catch in view, tried for a spectacular capture, but fell into a water hole! Before the ball could be retrieved the runner had crossed the plate, winning the game 2-1. Moseley allowed five hits, while the victors garnered but a trio of wallops off my delivery."

Power Five Defeats Acmes; Seeks Contests With School Squads

The Power five of the M. E. church defeated the fast Acme club, 33 to 26, recently in a clash on the home floor. The first half found both teams tied, 24-24. Dickey, the Cunninghams and Bucher were the point getters for the winners. Mackey, Kinney and Manypenny were the chief performers for the Acmes. The Power passers are out with a challenge to Salineville or Irondale high school teams. The lineups:

Power		Acme
Dickey	F.	Manypenny
O. Cunningham	F.	Wolfe
I. Cunningham	C.	Mackey

Maranville Cracks Ankle

AVALON, Cal., March 16.—Rabbit Maranville will be lost to the Cubs for at least three months and the injury he received in yesterday's game in Los Angeles may cripple him permanently. The doctors were not exactly sure of how long he will be out of the lineup when the Cubs left Washington this morning.

The accident occurred in the eighth inning when Maranville slid into third base. He caught his right foot on the staple that anchors the bag and something gave. He was carried from the field. An examination immediately afterwards revealed that the fibula bone in the right ankle was cracked. The bone was not completely broken but ligaments were torn and physicians declared it would be impossible to forecast how long it would take to heal the injury, which will prove a severe blow to the Cubs.

Maranville had instilled pep into the Cubs' infield. He also was acting captain of the nine and his advice had proven valuable to the younger men of the infield.

Pittsburgh Lands First Shutout in Paso Robles Clash

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 16—The Pirates won their first shutout of the season Sunday and the Paso Robles baseball club received a taste of major league baseball, when the home team club fell before the Buccaneers eight to nothing.

Mistakes on the part of the locals aided the Pirates and poor work on the paths hindered their own chances for piling up a few runs. Chief Feeley took the mound for the big leaguers and in four of the six rounds he worked got into trouble. His mates supported him well, in the field however, and he came through unscathed. Johnny Morrison finished with little trouble. Lee and McGrab handled the Pason Robles twirling assignment.

The Pirates scored five times in the second inning on four hits. Niehaus' triple being the big blow of the round. The last two runs came in the fifth, a walk and an error on a batted ball preceding Moore's three bagger to center.

RUNYON SAYS

BY DAMON RUNYON.
Copyright, 1925, International News Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, March 16, 1925.—This column is commencing to read like the one the writer compiled daily quite some years ago for the Pueblo Chieftain.

That was the title, "Personal Mention."

The writer, then a bustling young "cub" reporter, with a large notebook, went around and about the hotels and stores of Pueblo, finding out who was going away and where, and why; who was ill, and of what; who was visiting in the city and whom, and who had a new position, and what.

"The idea is to get the name of every person in this town in the paper every two or three months," said the city editor, a gentleman now, by the way, bald-headed, and married and living in Los Angeles.

It was interesting work. The most interesting part of it was the things the young reporter learned about people that he couldn't put in "Personal Mention." It afforded him excellent study in human nature.

The same reporter has learned a few things about people of your acquaintance out here in Los Angeles that he can't put in this "Personal Mention."

But only a few. Most everybody out here is happy, contented, doing well. That is what the writer likes best of all to chronicle—that someone is DOING WELL.

Let us see whom we have today.

MAURICE McLOUGHLIN, the most colorful, spectacular champion that ever swung a racket, is with Spalding's, in Los Angeles.

It doesn't take an old man to recall McLaughlin's first visit to New York. They may have been greater tennis players than McLoughlin. There has never been one of his dash, and fire, and human interest.

"DUTCH LEONARD, the American League lefthander, who figured in about four world's series, took the money he made in baseball and invested in fruit lands near Fresno. He has one of the showplaces of that region, welcomes all wayfarers hospitably, is accounted wealthy.

Donlin originally came from the coast. He was one of the most picturesque players ever in the game. His name is still as well remembered as if he were still playing. That, indeed, is FAME in baseball.

ADAM WALSH, Notre Dame center, the greatest center this writer ever saw, lives out here. His father has a grocery store in Hollywood. The football fans of Los Angeles are still talking of that Notre Dame backfield.

The baseball fans of Los Angeles say the best pitcher in the Pacific Coast league last season was Ol' Doc Obey Crandall, once of the Giants.

Crandall isn't so very old in years. But he has been called Ol' Doc so long he ACTS old. The writer gave him the title when Crandall was with the Giants. Its significance is now rather vague. It was well understood at the time it was applied.

McGraw used Crandall almost exclusively as a relief pitcher. He was literally a doctor of disabled ball games. He was one of the few men the writer ever saw who had a real good slow ball and with it NERVE enough to put it up to a batter IN A PINCH.

That was mainly Crandall's success as a relief pitcher—his slow ball, and his NERVE.

He usually came in behind blinding speed that the opposition had suddenly gauged. The change from speed to Crandall's slow delivery stopped the slugging. He saved many ball games for McGraw.

The name "Ol' Doc" somehow fitted Crandall's personality. He was a thick-set, loggy-looking fellow, drawling of speech, of country aspect generally. He was a great hitter in streaks. McGraw often used him as a pinch hitter.

To hear them talk of the "Ol' Doc" out here you might think he is positively antique. He is probably still well under forty.

Crandall always took good care of himself. He drank about one glass of beer per year when he was with the Giants. He was drinking his annual glass glass in a Pittsburgh saloon after winning a tough game, one hot day, when McGraw walked in.

McGraw fined Crandall $100 for the ONE glass. McGraw believed in picking shining marks for his examples.

Other ball players out here who will be recalled by big league fans are Salida Tom Hughes, once of the Yankees and other clubs, and Truck Hannah, also once of the Yanks.

Nurmi Will Decide On Distance Races For Boston Games

BOSTON, March 16—The distance which Paavo Nurmi will run at the initial indoor games of the Boston Lodge of Elks at Mechanics' building, March 31, will be decided by Nurmi himself.

Hugo Quist, acting for Nurmi, has notified the athletic committee of the Elks that the great Finnish athlete would compete at any distance the management desires, but the management of the athletic committee wishes to have the Finn name his own distance.

Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star, has notified the committee that he will compete at any distance from one to three miles. Lloyd Hahn and other stars will compete against Nurmi and Ray.

Kearns, in New York, Listens to Offers For Dempsey Battle

NEW YORK, March 16—With Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, in New York, it was expected today that numerous offers would be made for a bout featuring the champion to be held in the late summer at an open air arena in this vicinity.

Charley Henderson, promoter of a Long Island stadium, conferred with Kearns but Kearns said no definite proposition was made to him. Jimmy De Forest, newly appointed matchmaker of the Polo ground A. C., was to meet with Kearns and elaborate on the offer of the "greatest sum Dempsey ever received for a bout." Tex Rickard also is expected to make an offer for Dempsey's services.

Mount Keeps Floor Squad

Mount Union college basketball team, winner of eleven straight games in the Ohio conference and generally heralded as conference champion, will be an even harder team to defeat next season. Every member of the present squad is available for next winter, Capt. Lefty Miller, center, and Bo Labor, forward, are juniors, and the other members, Wilcoxen, Bromby and Orin are sophomores.

That basketball relations between Ohio Wesleyan and Mount Union will be resumed next season is the hope of many conference followers. Life on the Desert.
Opportunity Is There.
Alfalfa Beats Gold.
The Hodge Brothers Say.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

For an answer, see the Hodge Bros.' alfalfa ranch at Palliser, on the Santa Fe railroad about 12 miles west of here. You will learn courage, ambition and desire to work, will find plenty of opportunities, especially desire to work.

Gilbert and Robert Hodge, of Buffalo, came from a rich family. One of Buffalo's streets is named for them. The money disappeared as American fortunes sometimes do, about the time they were born. That was fortunate for them.

These two brothers, barely 20, did not look for some rich relative to offer a soft spot. They read that desert lands could be made fertile and productive. Under the homestead act and the desert land act the two brothers took up about 500 acres here on the Mojave desert.

A comfortable house for the brothers and their mother take the place of a tent in which the brothers lived and worked until the war broke out. Then they left everything, entered the army and went to Europe.

A little garage houses the car that makes them independent of distance. There is a stable for a team of horses used to cut the alfalfa and run the baling machine and a very contented cow that yields 28 quarts of milk a day on an alfalfa diet.

Everything there the brothers built with their own hands, including pumping station of concrete, the installation of an electric pump and a big reservoir for irrigation that holds 358,000 gallons.

A contractor wanted $2,000 to build the reservoir and guarantee it watertight. The boys didn't have $2,000. They dug and built the reservoir themselves with concrete sufficiently high above the ground. It is watertight.

The materials cost them $175.

For every pound of dry alfalfa put on the land 500 pounds of water—one million pounds of water for a ton of alfalfa. They do it and make it pay. An electric line nearby brings "white power" from the mountains and serves them cheaply.

It costs only $1.50 to pump 350,000 gallons of water. There on the desert, where donkeys and jack rabbits nibble sage brush and "grease wood" shrubs, the water in unlimited quantities is within 18 feet of the surface. And that marvelously fertile soil 15 FEET DEEP washed from mountainsides, through thousands of centuries, produces seven crops of alfalfa between May and October. AND THAT PAYS.

It supplies all the money that the brothers need to live and to improve their property.

Seventeen acres of alfalfa yield each season 127 tons which sell at the railroad siding a mile and a half away for $27 a ton—$3,429 worth of alfalfa from 17 acres. The desert land plus courage, hard work and water yields $184 to the acre.

It is an absolutely sure crop. No failures there. The sun shines all through the growing season. The water rises faithfully from subterranean streams and is directed through irrigation channels to the alfalfa. Seven times they cut it and seven times it grows, a crop more certain than ever was raised in the wonderful Nile valley. Sometimes Nile waters failed in the past. Desert irrigation never fails.

This story is not as exciting as the latest about Hollywood, Wall street, crime or gilded "society." But it's more important to the United States than exciting news.

Given enough men of courage to develop the unlimited resources of the nation, including crops that the deserts can produce and there is no need to worry about the future of the United States.

Is life dull on the desert? Not at all. Every day hundreds of autos pass on their way to the Pacific coast from all over the country. Occasionally great flying machines of the postoffice sweep overhead.

The young men of that country look forward to a time when after the day's work ends Ford's all metal monoplanes will fly down with them to

Crash Occurs at Grade Crossing Near Dayton.

Party Enroute to Urbana After Attending Theatre.

DAYTON, March 16.—One woman was killed, a man was probably fatally injured and four other persons were hurt when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into the side of a B. & O. special freight train at the old Troy pike crossing at the Belt railroad near here at 12:15 o'clock this morning.

The dead:
Miss Helen Lowe, 23, Urbana, Ohio.
The injured:
Clark Hamm, 22 Urbana, not expected to live.
Roger Rust, 22, Urbana, driver of the automobile, lacerations on arms and possible internal injuries.
Ethel Parue, 28, Urbana, lacerations both legs.
Ralston Pickerell, 30, Urbana, injured about head and shoulders.

One Girl Uninjured.

Pauline Detwiler, of West Liberty, Ohio, aged 20, another member of the party, was uninjured.

The injured, along with Miss Detwiler, were taken to a local hospital. Preliminary examination revealed that none but Hamm were seriously injured. Hospital attendants said he may die from loss of blood.

The body of Miss Lowe, which was severed just above the hips, was taken to a local undertaker's parlor, where it will be examined by Coroner Torrence later in the morning.

Miss Detwiler said at the hospital that the party had attended a Dayton theater performance last night and was en route home when the accident occurred. She said they were not aware of the presence of the train until the automobile crashed into it.

Brass Rails Stolen From Pump Station In Houston Avenue

Brass fittings and rails in the No. 2 pump station, Huston avenue, were stolen a few days ago, according to a report made to the police today. Entrance to the building was effected by forcing open the front door.

The pump station has not been in operation regularly since the new plant was erected near the state line. It is maintained, however, as an emergency station.

The value of the loot at junk prices is small, although the replacement value may amount to $100 or more.

The garage of Homer Faulk in Calcutta was entered Saturday night, several hundred dollars worth of tires, tubes and mechanic's tools being stolen. Mr. Faulk is ill in the City hospital. The police were notified of the theft.

Postoffice Menaced By Fire Sunday; Children Blamed

The postoffice, Fifth street and Broadway, was threatened by fire late Sunday afternoon, believed to have been started by children who have been making a practice of loafing in the lobby of the building.

Matches had been applied to the contents of a waste paper box in the lobby of the building. The blaze leaped several feet into the air, but none of the fixtures was damaged.

The janitor of the building, scenting the smoke which filled the entire building summoned Postmaster McClure. The box and its contents was destroyed when discovered. No one was on duty in the building at the time of the blaze.

The police issued a warning today that loafing in the postoffice lobby must cease or arrests will be made.

Tax payers were lined up this morning awaiting their turns at the office of Deputy Collector Fred George. It was estimated that more than 300 returns had been filed at 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. George is being assisted by A. B. May, a member of the agents' force from Cleveland. The services of the two collectors are free.

Tax returns may be sent to the district collector by mail, but must be postmarked before the hour of midnight to escape the penalty.

Mr. George and his assistant will be on duty at the tax office until 9 o'clock tonight.

WOMAN JURIST URGES WORLD BAN ON WAR

Suggests International Law Declaring Hostilities Illegal.

Enact international laws, making war a crime and punishable just the same as murder, was the advice of Florence E. Allen, Cleveland, judge of the Ohio supreme court, in an address before a fair sized audience in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Saturday night.

Miss Allen came here under auspices of the W. C. T. U., in behalf of a campaign to establish world-wide peace and banish future warfare. She spent the night here and went to Columbiana, East Palestine and Salem for talks on Sunday. Today she is scheduled to address a meeting in Pittsburgh. Her subject was The Supreme Challenge."

"I am not advocating or opposing any world court or league of nations plan, but I do say war must be eliminated if humanity is to survive," said Miss Allen. "We, as a great Christian nation, with other lands working under the cross of Jesus Christ, will be bled to the bone if another war such as the last should occur within the next 10 or 20 years.

Make War Illegal.

"My opinion is that there can be no step toward peace so long as war is recognized as legal. In order to suppress war we should do away with the causes of war and make it illegal.

"I hope the time will come when the men who plan wars will be tried in a court of justice just the same as the man who deliberately premeditates the murder of another is tried. Killing men in masses is just as unjustifiable and illegal as the killing of one man. Then and then only will peace, eternal peace, reign.

Judge Allen has talked with leaders of nations and she is of the opinion that all countries, both large and small, would be willing and eager, in fact, to enter into a treaty making all wars illegal.

Mrs. C. R. Reese, president of Crusade Union, W. C. T. U., was in charge of the meeting. The speaker was introduced by Mayor Charles Brown. Miss Ruth Bailey gave a vocal solo, while the singing was led by Prof. H. F. Laughlin. Prayers were offered by Dr. Frank G. Fowler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, and Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

C. S. SPEAKER, 69 YEARS OLD, IS DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Noted Lawyer Succumbs in His Home in Lisbon.

EX-PROSECUTOR

Funeral Services Will be Held Thursday Afternoon.

Attorney Charles S. Speaker, 69 years old, died in his home, West Lincoln way, Lisbon, shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday night of heart disease, following an illness of seven weeks.

Funeral services will be held in his late home at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Rev. W. E. Tilton, pastor of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church, officiating.

Members of the Columbiana County Bar Association will meet in Common Pleas No. 1 court at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon to attend the funeral in a body.

Mr. Speaker was born in the old Speaker homestead now standing at North Market and High street, Lisbon, November 19, 1855, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Speaker, then one of the most active tanners in eastern Ohio.

Elected Mayor of Lisbon.

In 1881 he was elected mayor of Lisbon on the Republican ticket, and served by re-election in that office until 1886.

In 1892 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Columbiana county, serving until 1897.

While Mr. Speaker never held any state or national office, he was twice a candidate for congress on the Republican ticket, first in 1902 and again in 1906. He was opposed in both the convention and at the primaries by James Kennedy of Youngstown.

Mr. Speaker never married. He made his home with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Speaker, and his nephew, Denver Speaker.

Active in Church Work.

He was an active member of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church. At the time of his death, he was chairman of the official board. For many years he was chosen a delegate to the annual conferences of the North Eastern Ohio Conference of the Methodist church. He taught many classes in the Sunday school. Prior to his illness he was teacher of the Women's Bible class.

Mr. Speaker made one trip abroad, visiting London and Paris, and while on this journey he made a close study of foreign court procedure.

During his career as a lawyer, he was counsel in many imported civic and criminal cases. He was an able lawyer.

He began the practice of law in 1880, and in later years was associated with George T. Farrell, of Lisbon.

RADIO THREATS BAFFLE PROBERS

(Copyright 1925, By I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—There's a lot of funny business going on in the air these days and night—if a pile of letters on the desk of chief radio Inspector Terrell, in the department of commerce tells the truth.

Officials were puzzled today over the receipt of an unusual number of complaints from persons in widely separated parts of the country that "psychic broadcasting stations" are operating. "Queer voices" making "spectral threats" have come to them via radio, according to some of the complainants.

Some of the letters obviosuly are the work of unsound minds—"nut letters"—as they are described in government circles—but others are not.

HUNDREDS FLEE FLOOD-SWEPT INDIANA TOWNS

No Loss of Life Reported; Heavy Property Damage.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Mar. 16.—With miles of the countryside under water today and the rampant Wabash river continuing to rise slowly here, hundreds of families in the low lands fled their homes to the protected districts.

Flood damage already has mounted to thousands of dollars. Bridges were washed away, roads undermined and scores of small farm buildings swept along in the path of the flood.

The Wabash river here stood at 19 feet this morning, with further rise inevitable as 21 feet were reported at Clinton, 15 miles north.

Steam lines as well as interurban roads, were forced to curtail service throughout the district when the flood waters failed to recede. From Peru, Ind., northward, no cars have been operated since early Saturday when the situation first became alarming.

No loss of life has been reported.

WARREN'S NAME AGAIN UNDER FIRE AS SENATE AND WHITE HOUSE CLASH

President's Threat to Give Michigan Man Recess Appointment as Attorney General Projects New Issue of Constitutional Powers Into Fight Between Executive and Capitol Hill.

NATION'S CHIEFTAIN STANDS PAT ON HIS SELECTION FOR CABINET.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, March 16.—President Coolidge having defied the new senate to keep Charles W. Warren out of his cabinet, that body prepared today to reject his attorney general nomination for the second time.

The president's threat to give Warren a recess appointment projected a new issue of constitutional powers into the clash between the executive and the senate. The Warren opposition openly charged the president with attempting to override the senate's constitutional authority "to advise and consent" on cabinet appointments and grimly announced the Warren appointment would be rejected as many times as the executive named him to head the department of justice.

The president sent word to administration leaders of the senate that he had in no wise retreated from the position he took Saturday night when he defied the senate to prevent Warren entering the cabinet. The president was reported as willing to make a national issue out of the controversy since he felt the senate had used a cabinet position as a political "football." His spokesmen said he was determined on a finish fight.

Goff Defends Warren.

The senate convened at 10:30 this morning for the final act in the Warren drama. An agreement provided for four hours debate before the final vote and with that taken, a recess was planned until tomorrow to give the president opportunity to consider its final action on the Warren nomination.

"We won't adjourn the special session," said Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, minority leader, "until the president says he has no further nominations to submit."

Senator Goff, Republican, of West Virginia, in his maiden speech, opened the administration final drive to confirm Warren. Goff was formerly assistant attorney-general.

"Warren is eminently fitted for the office," Goff said.

Goff read a prepared biographical sketch of Warren, in which particular emphasis was laid on the nominee's legal training and qualifications, which had been assailed so bitterly by Democrats and progressives.

Goff told of the award of a distinguished service medal to Warren for his services "in preparing the legal details for the draft."

In the citation, the president said Warren displayed unusual patriotism, loyalty and executive ability," declared Goff.

In emphasis, Goff fairly shouted the last three words.

Reed Assails Nominee

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, spoke first for the Warren opposition.

"I agree that Mr. Warren was faithful to his trust," said Reed. "His trust was the sugar trust and he served it faithfully. It takes a vivid imagination to set up a claim that his sugar trust connection was 30 years ago. He appeared as lawyer for the sugar trust in federal hearings concluded in 1922 and he can't even plead

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The biggest crowd within memory swarmed over the capitol today and into the senate galleries.

An hour before the senate convened, the senate lobbies became so jammed that it was necessary to call out police reserves to preserve order, and the elevators were stopped to prevent any more persons from getting near the senate galleries.

Expectation that there would be another fight in the senate similar to that on Saturday is said to have caused the rush for seats.

WELLSVILLE MAN IS INJURED WHEN AUTO UPSETS; COMPANION ARRESTED

A. W. Morrow Severely Lacerated in Accident at Canton--R. E. Round, Driver Faces Court.

CANTON, Mar. 16.—A. W. Morrow, Wellsville suffered sever lacerations of the head and R. E. Round, also of Wellsville, was arrested on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, when their car sideswiped another automobile near here late Sunday night.

Morrow is in Mercy hospital where physicians say he will recover, but probably will be badly disfigured.

According to deputy sheriffs, the Round car was speeding on the Canton-Louisville road near "death curve" when it collided with a machine driven by R. J. Angell, Pittsburgh. The Round car, a large sedan, left the road, jumped a ditch, hit soft mud in a field, turned a complete somersault and then ran for a considerable distance in mud up to the axles.

Morrow was cut by flying glass as the car turned over.

Round was arrested at Mercy hospital where he went to visit Morrow.

the Pacific about 75 miles way for an ocean bath, bringing them back to the ranch in time for bed at 10 and a fresh start at 5 a. m. That's the routine there.

For those that care to dream dreams, after they hace irrigated their alfalfa fields, pumped the water, leveled off new lands, milked the cow and beded down the horses there is plently of food for the imagination near Barstow. A few miles away to the west are oil wells working. Fifteen miles in the other direction a powerful company is drilling. There are marble quarries in the hills. The Calico mine from which fifty millions in gold have already been taken has been reopened. Another gold mine is operated nearby.

The 500 acres that these brothers took up under the homestead and desert land act, putting in such earnest work are worth today $50,000 because they have proved that the land is perfect for alfalfa.

And let farmers in the east imagine this.

The young men do not plough the soil. That would turn up the sour land beneath and bury the thin top coating of soil that contains the desert's small amount of humus.

They scratch the soil with a sprag tooth harrow, sow the alfalfa seed and cut their seven crops a year, using no fertilizer.

Alfalfa needs lime and iron. The soil is strong in both. Neighboring hills are of rock that is almost pure lime. And the deep alfalfa roots do the plowing, sweeten the soil, supply the humus.

If you talk to the Hodge brothers about oil and gold they smile and say that oil and gold are interesting, and he who chooses may hunt for them. But alfalfa that grows seven crops a year is good enough for them.

They live on their own land, spending for its improvement the money that they take from the earth, contented in their work, absolutely certain of the future, and a thousand times rewarded for their labor by the happiness of their widowed mother who lives with them, enjoying the success of the boys that she brought up so well.

If you know any better life than that please mention it.

For information about acquiring desert land under the homestead and desert lands act, write to your congressman or to the secretary of the interior at Washington.

There are thousands of square miles of this desert land. But don't touch it unless you mean to contribute hard work and courage. The government will help you select land that has water within reach below the surface and that will grow crops.

To know how to get to Barstow write to the office of the Santa Fe at Chicago. When you get there Mr. White, who represents the Santa Fe in Barstow will tell you how to get information and show you the fine new town that they are building on top of the hill to replace the old town.

Is the case of the Hodge brothers exceptional and not to be duplicated? No.

Five miles east of them on the same road is the Emerson ranch, of 160 acres. The owner who bought it from some discouraged owner, with more desire for money than for work, paying for it just $24, 15 cents an acre, has just sold his place for $30,000. He started ahead of the Hodge boys, planted alfalfa first as they did, then having got the land right by irrigation and the humus that alfalfa puts into ground, he turned into fruit, grapes, pears, almonds.

He is putting his $30,000 into gold mine proposition. Perhaps he has done better than stick to the ranch. Let's hope so.

The Hodge brothers, proceeding cautiously by the way have added melon growing to their alfalfa.

The only difficulty there is that the melons grow so big they are not commercially available for the average restaurant, the portions would be too big.

But Fred Harvey, food king of the Santa Fe, buys them. Watermelons, casabas, Spanish melons and all the desert dwellers and workers will tell you that the melons cannot be equaled or their alfalfa either by the fields of the Imperial valley.

There are opportunities left in the United States, plenty of them, provided you feel inclined to work and can endure existence more than two blocks away from a moving picture show with only the stars at night to take the place of the screen stars.

260 CONVERTS AS MEET ENDS

Anderson M. E. and Nazarene Church Revival Closes.

Concluding services of the Anderson M. E.-Nazarene church revival campaign were conducted at the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon and evening.

More than 260 persons professed conversion or sanctification during the series of meetings which were in charge of Evangelist I. M. Ellis of Bethany, Okla. Many of the new converts have already been admitted to the church rolls, while others will unite later.

Ward brothers' orchestra played at the Sunday afternoon service. Selections were also given by a quartet, made up of Prof. and Mrs. Kenneth Wells, Mrs. O. L. Benedum and Rev. J. H. Smith. Rev. Ellis preached on "Divine Healing." The sick were anointed by Rev. G. M. Formby of Grand Crossing, Fla., at the conclusion of the preaching service.

A musical program preceded the evening service. The evangelist based his sermon on the subject, "The Unpardonable Sin." Evangelist Ellis and Prof. and Mrs. Wells left today for a series of meetings in Muncie, Ind. Prof. Wells will go to Pasadena, Cal., next fall, where he will take charge of the voice department at Pasadena University. Rev. Formby tomorrow begins a week's meeting in the Nazarene church at Alliance. He will be assisted by Ward brothers' orchestra.

Society Milliner Loses Fight to Save Burglar From Jail

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—Mrs. Ada B. Woodson, Washington society milliner who, after a search of two years, found her missing daughter married to Morris J. Seldow, burglar and bakery wagon driver, lost the legal fight to save Seldow from jail today when he was sentenced to 30 daysin the workhouse for assaulting a passenger in 1923 while employed as a motorman by the New York Railway company.

At the expiration of this sentence he will be returned to Elmira for thirteen months and twenty days to finish serving a term for burglary.

Despite testimony by investigators that Seldow had committed bigamy in marrying Mary, her daughter, Mrs. Woodson announced she would appeal to Governor Smith for a pardon.

Warren's Name

The president's authority to resubmit Warren's name was challenged by Senator King, Democrat of Utah, who inserted in the record a resolution declaring the act unconstitutional. King said he would not ask for a vote on his resolution but wanted it a part of the record so that the constitutional issue could be raised if the president gave Warren a recess appointment.

The King resolution would hold that "resubmission of the nomination at the present session of the senate is not in the constitutional prerogatives of the president and that the consideration of the said resubmitted nomination after final action has been taken thereon(is contrary to the constitution and to the rules of the senate as well as incompatible with the dignity and prerogatives of the senate."

If Warren is given a recess appointment, King warned, he will call up this resolution at the net session of the senate. Its passage would be without precedent in the history of the government.

Gillett Rebukes Senate.

Senator Gillett., Republican of Massachuesetts, in his first speech, came vigorously to the defense of Warren. He mildly rebuked the senate for "the volume of time consumed here in comparison with the other end of the Capitol."

Gillett formerly was speaker of the house.

"It has been the custom for scores of years not to refuse a presidential cabinet appointment unless the appoin teeise harged with flagrant incompetency", sail Gillett. "Mr. Warren has not been thus charged."

"If we shut out men because they have been connected with big business, then we deny public employment to the most competent men of the country".

Gillette said Warren "was with the so-called sugar trust when congress was first framing anti-trust laws, and nobody knew from year to year what the changes in the law would be."

Directs Fire at Couzens.

"The senator from Michigan says that 96 per cent of the people of Michigan do not want Warren confirmed," said Gillett. "The senator evidently got his information from a source that he knew would be favorable to his own view. The Michigan legislature passed a resolution asking that Warren be confirmed, and did this despite an attempt to have the resolution sidetracked and sent to the committee. I hold that the Michigan legislature knows as much about the sentiment of Michigan as the tax-ridden senator from that state."

"Doesn't the senator (Gillett) believe that the sentiment of the Michigan delegation in congress knows as much about the sentiment of the state as does the legislature?" asked Couzens.

"Yes, of course."

"Well, of the 13 members in the house and two senators, I do not know of one that favors Warren's confirmation," snapped Couzens.

"The senator is wrong in that," Replied Gillet. "I know that the delegation is not unanimously against Warren," replied Gillett.

Politics In Debate.

Politics was brought into the debate when Gillett twitted Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, for having declined the Democratic vice-Presidential nomination last year.

"It would have been a blow to Montana if both her Senators had been defeated as vice-Presidential nominees in the same year," said Gillett.

"The senator infers that partisan motives inspired the opposition to Warren," said senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas. "Does not he know that the Republican vice-Presidential nomination was tendered to Senator Borah, of Idaho, who is leading Republican opposition to Mr. Warren?"

Senator William A. Borah, a Republican, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also opposed the nomination in a speech that frequently drew applause from the galleries.

"The argument has been advanced that the senate ought to yield to the President, ought to treat our obligation under the constitution as nothing but a courteous gesture," said Borah. "I do not think so.

"No senate and no senator would challenge the President unless for the most important reasons, reasons that they believe to be guiding and impelling. This, I think is such a time.

"Down through the history of the years, if there has been a dereliction of duty here, it is not on the side of opposing the President but toward giving the President sole responsibility when the constitution places a share of that responsibility inescapably upon us."

Borah's Vitrolic Satire.

With vitrolic satire, Borah compared Gillett to a "former senator from Massachutetts, one Daniel Webster." Borah said Webster had voted against an ambassadorial appointment, "for sufficient reasons," and made a speech "against executive domination." Borah said he would let the country judge of the Wisdom of the conflicting courses followed by the two Massachusetts senators.

"It is much easier to go along in Washington than to disagree," said Borah. "If there is any atmosphere on God's green earth that ewakens backbone, it is the Washington atmosphere.

"I firmly believe that Mr. Warren is unfit for this office. I do not challenge the integrity of the President for if he had my conviction toward Mr. Warren, he would follow it. If I do less here, I would quickly forfeit the President's respect. I cannot and shall not vote to confirm this man for attorney general.

"I have no quarrel with the man who thinks Warren is fitted for the office," said Borah. "I quarrel only with that man who thinks Warren is unfit but votes for him."

"There are meny men who have acquired great wealth and property in the United States who are living in daily violation of our laws," said Borah. "They should be the first to obey the law, but they are daily forming great trusts and combinations in violation of the law."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, March 16.—Industrial and railroad stocks made a show of strength at the opening of the market today and prices for most of the active stocks were fractionally higher. However, before the end of the first hour such pivotal stocks as Baldwin, General Electric and American Can were down to 1 to 3 points. Bethlemeh Steel, Amberican Woolen and other active stocks which bore the brunt of heavy selling last week again under pressure and declined abruptly.

Commodity prices showed further declines. Money conditions were better.

The grain market was lower at the opening and cotton with the exception of March contracts, also showed a loss in early trading.

Heaviness increased in the second hour and stocks were thrown on the market in large blocks at falling prices. United States Steel lost a full point from its opening price. Active Copper, Motor, railroad, equipment and oil stocks followed the same trend. Thought there were no developments in the St. aul receivership situation traders sold the preferred stock heavily and it declined 2 points from the opening price to a new low at 13½. The bonds were also unsteady, but not so ponicky as last week. Savage Arms, Allis Chalmers, American Razor and other pob stocks made a firm stand in the firs hour, but were compelled to recede against bearish attacks. American Can made the best showing of the industrial leaders and sold in good volume around 180. Later this stock led the market in a moderate rally.

The oils and railroad stocks were driven off less than the main body of the industrials and trading in them was in smaller volume. Frisco common and Norfolk and Western were strong spots in the railroad list; Marland oil and Shell Union made the best showing in the independent oils. The market slowed up under pressure and short selling accounted for the bulk of offerings. Call money was four per cent.

"Dollar Day in the mercantile business is indicative of exceptional values. This Dollar Day is no exception to the rule. What greater bargain was ever offered to the citizens of Wellsville than to purchase an interest in the promoting of Hammond park for the sum of one dollar? It will pay big dividends in the form of enjoyment after the day's work is done, to take the family to the park there to breathe the invigorating air of the country, to see the children romp and play and not fear the street cars or automobiles."

DISCOUNT FIRM HEADS ON TRIAL

Wellsville district stockholders in the Cleveland Discount Co., today turn their eyes to the Fifth City where Josiah Kirby, founder and first president of the company, and Raymond L. Poland, its former treasurer, buttressed by an imposing array of legal counsel, go on trial in common pleas court, charged with issuance of a false statement, in violation of the state blue sky laws.

Mrs. Kirby, who had come across the continent, from Califronia, sat by the side of her husband in the dingy court room as the trial opened. Former Appelate Judge Walter Meals, Luther Day and Joseph C. Brietenstein were at Kirby's counsel table. The staff was represented by special prosecutors Charles Higley, Joseph I. Eagleson and David E. Green.

It was anticipated that several days would be taken in securing a jury, due to the fact that more than 10,000 stockholders in the discount company reside here.

Kirby was confident of prompt acquittal when court opened.

"I am innocent of the charge against me," he declared. "I am completely confident that I shall be vindicated by the court and jury."

William H. Hopple, of Tiffin, O., one of the largest stockholders in the Discount company, and who acted as president for a short time following Kirby's resignation, two years ago, was one of the witnesses summoned for the state. Twenty witnesses have been called by the defense.

E. G. MORROW IS BIRTHDAY HOST

E. G. Morrow entertained a number of his friends on Friday night at his home in Third street, the affair honoring his fifty-seventh birthday anniversary.

An elaborate program of entertainment was carried out, during which the honor guest was presented with a number of gifts, including a smoking outfit with an electric attachment for reading, and a leather traveling bag.

Mr. Morrow welcomed his guests in a short address following which J. F. Deimer took the chair as toastmaster. Among the outstanding features of the program were recitations by Miss Phyllis Carter, of Salineville; and Miss Pia Bologna, of this city, both of whom also distributed flowers to the guests.

Three vocal selections were given by George Imbrie, of this city, accompanied by Dr. A. D. Weinsweig.

A humorous talk was given by Frank Turner. Short speeches were made by Attorney W. F. Lones and Roy Thomas. A number of songs and stories, several in dialect, were given by A. Morrow.

At the close of the program a buffet luncheon was served.

The guests included: Albert Morrow, E. G. Whitacre, B. D. Beacom, W. F. Lones, R. H. Keay, Mayor James S. Barnes, W. L. Fogo, J. F. Deimer, George Imbrie, Dr. A. D. Weinsweig, John Rehman, A. B. She is survived by her husband, Watson Faloon, and three children, Mrs. Homer Toban, L. A. Faloon and Willis Faloon, all of Wellsville; one grand child, Nova Faloon; a brother, Davis Shaw of Summitville, and one sister, Rebecca Faloon of Kensington.

Following an illness of several months, Amos Russell, 70 years old, of Tenth street, died Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock in the East Liverpool hospital, death being due to complications. He had been in the hospital for several months. The body was removed to the D. N. MacLean funeral home.

He is survived by one nephew, Frank MacLean, in Wilkinsburg, Pa., and several nieces in Cleveland.

Youth's Arm Fractured.

FILES CHARGES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Ronald Gibson has filed a petition for divorce against his wife, Edna Gibson, through his counsel, Attorney W. A. O'Grady. They were married May 15, 1920, and have two children, aged 3 and five years, respectively.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with having an uncontrollable temper, and when enraged, she becomes violent and "has threatened to kill plaintiff at divers times," the petition relates.

The petition declares that on May 15, 1920, while in a fit of temper Mrs. Gibson threw a heavy china vase at the head of her husband and then she attacked him, tearing his clothing and choking and striking him.

The petition put down May 18, 1922, as the date when Mrs. Gibson is alleged to have thrown an alarm clock at her husband and also struck him with a smoothing iron.

While riding with her husband in the side car of a motorcycle on July 4, 1922, according to the petition, she became enraged and attempted to steer the vehicle over an embankment with intent to injure the plaintiff. On July 5, 1922, it is alleged, she threatened to kill her husband.

Mrs. Gibson is charged with failure to care for her home or give proper attention to the moral welfare of their children, and that she has adopted vile and vicious habits, constantly cursing and swearing and using such language in the presence of her children.

The husband also claims she locked him in their home while she attended carnivals and moving picture shows. The petition asks the court to grant the father the custody of the minor children.

Two Training Camps.

Wellsville youths who expect to go to citizens' military training camp this summer will be able to choose between two such camps, one at Camp Knox, Ky., and the other at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

John Fickes of Riverside avenue, this city, is equipped with application blanks for prospective campers. Columbiana county already has reported 15 applicants, including Donald E. Burgett, from Salineville.

The majority of students this year will go to Camp Knox for the month of July, although 1,500 basic and advanced infantry students from Indiana and Ohio can be accommodated at Fort Benjamin Harrison from July 8 to August 6. The cavalry, air service, signal corps and engineering students will go to Knox.

For What Is Life?

For what is life, if measured by the space,
Not by the act?
Or masked man, if valued by his face,
Here's one outlived his peers.
And told forth fourscore years:
He vexed time, and busied the whole state;
Troubled both foes and friends;
But ever to no ends;
What did this stirrer, but die late? late?
How well at twenty had he fallen or stood?
For three of his fourscore, he did no good —Ben Johnson.

Dead Line for Income Tax

Today is the last day of grace on the payment of the 1924 income tax.

Mailed returns postmarked before midnight will be acceptable, Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Fred George, on duty at th postoffice, has announced. Failure to report your earnings and make at least a quarterly payment of the year's taxes will result in assessment of a penalty.

Through the action of a Republican congress, the rate has been cut in half. On incomes under $5,000, two per cent instead of four per cent tax is assessed, with a 25 per cent reduction also permitted.

And indications are that President Coolidge's appeal for further tax reductions will be heeded by congress before the time for payment on 1925 earnings. Washington reports are to the effect that the rate will be cut at least 25 per cent when congress meets next December.

At the next session of congress, Representative Madden, chairman of the appropriations committee in the house, will call up his resolution which would result in making income taxes automatic. This plan would do away with continuous income legislation. It would mean that when the treasury had a surplus of more than $50,000,000 a proportionate automatic decrease would be made in everyone's income tax.

All this means that every effort is to be made to carry out President Coolidge's promise to the people that whenever possible federal taxes would be lowered.

Marriage and Meals

Thousands of people have been laughing over the "Breakfast," "Lunch" and "Dinner" stories in the Ladies' Home Journal.

One is the woman who has stood one too many grouchy breakfast moods of her husband's, who packs to leave home, and who, as the cords of her normal, friendly existence tighten about her, finds as much difficulty accounting for her suitcase as any criminal with a bag of loot. One is of the husband who, resenting his wife's objection to his bringing an unannounced luncheon guest, decides to live a nobly and silently suffering life apart, who moves his belongings into the sewing room, only to find, as the cords of normal, friendly existence tighten around him, that his wife will never even find out what he mussed up her sewing room for. Then there is the husband, raging against the wife who telephoned him to do last-minute errands for her formal dinner, trying desperately to nurse his wrath while luxuriously relaxing in his hot bath, and finding the dinner proceeding perfectly well, regardless of his fury.

All these, with their aura of comradely living, seem peculiarly humorous partly because they so narrowly escape the tragic, partly because almost everyone has experienced similar difficulties.

Most matrimonial troubles, whether before, at or after meals, come to this: Between any two people, however happily mated, there is an irreducible minimum of misunderstanding. When they can stand off and laugh at it, they are all right. When they cannot, they are apt to find it becoming a tragic minimum.

A Lama in London

Seven Lamas from far-off Tibet have been enticed out into the world and are visiting London. They are seeing things new and strange to them. An interpreter is giving some of their impressions to the public. After watching a man working an electric drill on the streets, one of the Tibetan visitors is reported to have commented to this effect:

"The English are a very clever people. They are much clever than we are. But they do not use their arms enough. It would be much better for that man if he used his arms instead of holding that machine. The machines in England are wonderful, but I think that if the English are not careful the machines will master them and make them do what they want."

There is much material for serious thought in the Lama's words. All of the modern conveniences, inventions, machines and new ways of doing things more quickly and easily and cheaply than ever before will fail to benefit mankind if human beings allow mechanical development to get too far ahead of moral, intellectual and spiritual development. It takes more than powerful machinery, clever mechanical devices and material wealth to keep a civilization alive and healthy.

Man, The Killer

An unbelievably strange incident, one of those usually regarded as invented by the human imagination, is related by the foreman of a section crew on the Glacier Park division of the Great Northern railway. This man saw a deer from the national park floating down the Flathead river on a cake of ice. Not far from a falls, where deer would have met certain death, the frightened animal took advantage of the current which carried the ice floe within 10 feet of the shore. The deer jumped, landing at a place where the railroad track skirts the shore of the river, and falling directly in front of an advancing train. It was struck and hurled back into the river dead.

The poor beast had almost miraculously avoided violent death in one form to meet it instantly in another. It was the only deer in that section killed by a train in several years, while a dozen or more of its fellows that had wandered outside of the reservation have been killed by hunters during the past winter. Man still seems to be a worse menace to wild life than either nature or fate.

The Toonerville Trolley That Meets All The Trains — By Fontaine Fox

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Dealing With Steel Workers.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Steel workers have benefitted more than miners from the industrial representation plan of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Such is the conclusion reached as the result of a long investigation conducted by the department of industrial studies of the Russell Sage Foundation.

The men employed in the steel works of the company controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., were able to secure the actual eight-hour work day five years before the United States Steel corporation and other large employers in the steel industry were forced to concede it to their employes. This, the report declares, was a direct and immediate result of industrial representation under the so-called Rockefeller plan.

When this plan was established in the coal mines of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company it was as a peace measure following one of the longest and bitterest strikes in the history of the country. No strike of all the workers in the steel mills of the company had ever occurred up to that time and they were given representation without having asked for it and without having presented any complaints or grievances to the management. That was in May, 1916. Less than two years later they secured the actual eight-hour day, which was nothing short of a startling improvement in their working conditions, and then, singularly enough, within a year practically all of them walked out when the general strike of steel workers was called.

When one considers that the prevailing working day in the essential processes of the industry was at the time, and for almost five years afterwards, 12 hours, the introduction of the actual eight-hour day throughout the Minnequa steel works was an achievement of first importance, says the report. When the Steel corporation announced in 1918 the establishment of the basic eight-hour day, the Rockefeller company first proposed a similar arrangement in its mills. That is, while the men would continue to work more than eight hours—and most of them 12 hours—they would be paid on the basis of an eight-hour day with and a half for all time worked over eight hours.

Had to Consult Employes.

But while in the plants of the Steel corporation the basic eight-hour day was established as a recommendation of Judge Gary without soliciting the views of the employes, in the Minnequa steel works it was necessary first to consult the employes' representatives regarding the method of introducing the change, and when the representatives of the mechanical department were called in they declared that they wanted a real eight-hour day, rather than a basic eight-hour day. The management agreed to that, whereupon the representatives from all other divisions of the works made a similar demand, and accordingly the actual instead of the basic eight-hour day was adopted throughout the plant.

"Thus," says the expert of the Sage foundation, "it was the machinery provided by the industrial representation plan that for the first time in the United States enabled the employes of a large steel works to negotiate collectively with their employers on the very controversial question of the length of the working day, and to secure the actual eight-hour day in all departments of the plant."

Where the representation plan does not function so happily for the steel workers of the Rockefeller company, it is stated, is in the matter of fixing wage scales, for it provides that the company shall pay the same rates of wages as its competitors, which in practice means that they will follow the rates established from time to time by the United States Steel corporation.

Progressive industrial managers have shown that it is not necessary for a plant to adopt with absolute uniformity the scale of wages paid by its competitors, since the cost of production which is the important point to an employing corporation, varies with local conditions.

A company must keep its cost of production as low as that of its competitors. it may, however, because of more efficient organization or of lower freight rates or of its ability to get its raw materials more easily and cheaply, be able to pay higher wages than its competitors without exceeding the competitive selling price. It is doubtful, therefore, whether the Colorado Fuel and Iron company must always follow the Steel corporation in fixing its wage rates. The company itself when it adopted the actual eight-hour day in 1918, proved that it was not compelled to follow blindly standards set by its competitors.

Why the Steel Workers Struck.

It was this question of wages and the feeling that in reality no steel workers anywhere in the country had any real voice in fixing wage rates, since the Steel corporation established the scales through its executive board, that led employes of the Rockefeller company to join in the general steel strike of 1919.

"For before the strike, it is pointed out in the conclusions reached by these investigators, "they had already enjoyed the eight-hour day as well as several other conditions which the men in the rest of the industry so badly wanted. Yet when the strike call was issued to the steel workers of the country in September, 1919, the men employed by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, with very few exceptions walked out. This extraordinary response was due to a desire to help build an organization powerful enough to demand industrial citizenship for the workers throughout the industry and thus to guarantee them a voice in determining what the basic standards of pay and work should be.

"At present, then, the scope of the industrial representation plan is seriously limited. It is true that in an industry so devoid of any tradition concerning representation of the workers as the steel industry, the plan marks a distinct step in advance toward recognizing the workers' aspiration. Under the plan the men of the Minnequa steel works secured such important gains as the actual eight-hour day, an opportunity to participate in revising wage scales, a method of presenting and discussing grievances, and a greater degree of security in their jobs through enjoying the right to appeal to higher officials against the decisions of foremen and superintendents.

"Nevertheless, until the men throughout the industry as a whole secure adequate and effective representation in determining wage standards, those employed in any one plant, such as the Minnequa, are bound to be dissatisfied. Every week the Minnequa workers are reminded by their pay envelopes that the scope of their representation does not give them an effective share in determining their own earnings and none whatever in determining those of their fellow workers in the steel industry at large."

The most serious obstacle to the success of the Rockefeller plan, according to Ben M. Selekman, who conducted the investigation for the Sage foundation, is the minor official and not the higher official of the company. He says that as long as the functions of "hiring and firing" are in the hands of foremen and superintendents there will be dissatisfaction and complaints of favoritism and arbitrariness. It is also important, he says, that promotions should be made uniformly upon the basis of seniority.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

PARIS, March 16.—I have met the most celebrated sportsman and bon vivant of France. His name is pretty well known in America as the result of cabled stories of young American beauties falling desperately in love with him.

He is Henri Letellier, best known as the proprietor of Le Journal, one of the leading newspapers of Paris. I expected to see a dashing, excitable and monocled Beau Brummel—a fellow who radiated enthusiasm and the sheer joy of living.

Instead I saw a slight, thin, flat chested man whose face reminded you of the beak of a pelican. He was dressed with the modesty of a counting house clerk. He seemed tired, listless and worn. Yet he was on his way to one of his celebrated all night parties at his home in Rue Spontini.

Latellier has a hundred different interest—all profitable. He is a plunger at the race track and the gaming tables. He owns some of the casinos. Several American stage beauties are reported to owe their ropes of pearls to his generosity.

He is said to be amazingly attractive to those women of the world to be found always in Paris. They are the migratory birds of passage you find in the bazaars of Bagdad, the shooting boxes of the Highlands. In London, Venice and Algiers. They fly everywhere.

I do not believe M. Letellier would cause a head to turn on Fifth avenue in New York. Yet in the hotel foyer where he stood everybody stopped to look at him. Some were peeping from behind marble pillars. Others walked up to him and looked him over with frank curiosity.

Parisians love the man who takes a big chance. Letellier has for years followed Neitzche's advice: "Be hard; live dangerously." His papers are daring and progressive and what he makes out of them and his other enterprises he spends with lavish hand. And France loves that.

One often sees Mabelle Gilman Corey among the butterflies. Having reaped a fortune through her marriage with W. E. Corey, the steel man, she is able to entertain lavishly. She still looks fairly youthful when others her age are beginning to show imprint of Time. She has adopted the bird-like quickness of manner of the French-

Paris has many sidewalk entertainers we used to know on the old Bowery as "buskers." They make their stand in front of theaters and eat fire, swallow swords and do feats of magic for the few centimes that are pitched them. The Paris "busker" has reduced living to a minimum. He can exist on about 25 cents a week. He sleeps in doorways and cadges food and drink by performing in the little circular bars.

It is the law in France that the best literature must be in cheap paper back form in reach of the poor. It is a constructive bit of legislation, but is spoiled by the laxity in permitting the most flagrant exhibits of pornography to be sold everywhere. Every book stall displays volumes that would send the seller to prison in America.

Your boy, too, can have this refreshing, exhilarating, all-alive look of health

You just know he's NOT well
There is no reason for him to look or feel this way

CONSTIPATION means DISEASE

These young rascals when they are well are the greatest institutions on earth. But when that insidious lurking monster—Constipation—ties up their bowels, then the world is dark. Coated tongue, loss of appetite, wakefulness, bad breath, pimples, weakness, dull mind are only a few indications that you are going to have a mighty sick boy if you do not see that his clogged bowels are opened up at once.

Dr. Caldwell's
SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

—relieves constipation. It appeals to the manly little fellow. Father, mother, sister and baby like it too. And for 30 years it has pointed the way to health along Nature's road for all of them. A pleasant tasting combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics. 10,000,000 bottles used annually through out the country prove its effectiveness.

As Easy To Take As Grandma's Jam

One dose is enough to remove the obstruction, and after that diminishing doses will allow Nature to again assert herself and resume her proper functions. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should be in every home.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

Pulque Target in Mexico.

Pulque, a beverage in Mexico which has a hold on the working classes similar to the vodka habit in Russia some years ago, is being made the target of leaders in that country who believe its prohibition or strict regulation will eliminate some of the misery of the lower classes. President Calles is apparently leaning toward prohibition as he established it in Sonora when he was governor of that state.

COMMON SENSE IN SMALL DOSES

Folks who sneeze in public places—
In the movies—at the races—
Blowing germs in people's faces,
Spread a lot of deadly "flu;"
We like the lad who deftly smothers
Infectious sneezing 'round the mothers,
Wives and sweethearts of his brothers—
That's what sneezers all should do.

RESUME RAIL RATE HEARING MONDAY, MAR. 30

Pottery Manufacturers Oppose Increase In Charges

EYES ON FIGHT

Charles F. Donley, Traffic Counselor, Submits Report.

Hearings on the application of the railroads of the country for permission to increase rates east of the Mississippi river, which move is being protested by the local Chamber of Commerce, will be resumed on Monday, March 30.

Charles F. Donley, Pittsburgh traffic counselor, is representing the Chamber of Commerce and the United States Potters association at the hearing. Local manufacturers are opposing the increased freight rates but favor an equalization of shipping charges.

The rates to shippers in this district would be increased as high as 25 per cent if the tariffs, proposed by the manufacturers, become effective.

Donley's Report.

In a report to the local chamber, Donley declares that 1,300 pages of typewritten records and 114 exhibits have been submitted at the hearing, which is only about two-thirds finished. The report continues:

"The opening statement of the general counsel for the railroads was to the effect that they were starting on an adventure rather than into a fight; that they would endeavor to put before the commission all of the facts and to show them just what the actual rate situation is, both with reference to levels and relationships.

"There are hundreds of interesting local and general conditions that have been involved, and of which we have made a thorough record, but do not think they would be interesting reading for our clients if we could set down all of these details.

"It can probably be summmed up by stating that the points that are to be decided are, first, whether we should have a strict mileage scale between each to and from point; second, mileage rates between origin and destination groups; third, comparative level of rates between C. F. A. and trunk line territory; fourth, the relationship between class rates in trunk line territory; fifth, level of rates for branch and lateral lines, short line railroads.

"As the carriers are taking the position that they do not have to justify any of their proposals or suggestions it will mean more work for the shippers in bringing in evidence to show the inequalities of proposals which the carriers have made. It is expected an adjournment will be declared for two or three weeks to give shippers an opportunity to study the carriers' evidence and then resume for the purpose of cross examination of their witnesses."

"The evidence of the railroads which has been put in so far has shown existing and proposed rates throughout the entire official classification territory. It shows present and proposed rates for local and long distance groups; intra-territorial and between three general territories; grouping for the eastern ports; also for the 'arbitrary' territory in the north and south portions of trunk line territory; in fact, the data covers all of the territory involved except the so called 'margin' district which is the border between trunk line and C. F. A. territory. Announcement was made by the railroads near the end of the first session of hearing that they were working on some proposals for rates in this district but admitted it was a proposition on which it was very difficult to make up their minds.

"An entirely new method of arriving at group mileage rates in trunk line territory was put forth. This is quite technical and will require great deal of study to determine just how its application will effect the general lines of commerce.

"The lines serving the Virginia cities and southern part of official classification territory are holding out for their usual differentials for branch line rates. Detailed testimony has been given by witnesses for the Long Island railroad and other eastern railroads to show what their idea of the proposed adjustments should be.

Voluminous Records.

"Voluminous records have been made to show that the rates hould be higher in the trunk line than in Central Freight association territory. So far as can be determined there has not been any good reason advanced as to why the intra-territorial, that is, Central Freight association to trunk line, or New York to Chicago, or the reverse direction rates, should be increased, except the mathematical formula of scalling these rates to conform to certain rate standards.

Fearful over the inroads of American manufacturers, producers of Spain are considering the standardization of their wares and quantity production patterned after methods of this country.

Peritonitis In Children May Result In Convulsions

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND.

LINING the abdominal cavity and reflected upon the loops of intestines to furnish them with a delicate covering, is the thin, shiny, transparent tissue called the peritoneum.

This structure contains blood vessels and glands. Thin as it is, it is capable of having serious diseases. One such is known as peritonitis—inflamaton of the peritoneal membrane.

This disease is met at all ages. It is more common in grown persons, but it does attack children, even new-born babes. As a matter of experience, most of the cases in childhood occur during the first few weeks of life.

There are a lot of causes for peritonitis, but in the last analysis an infection of some sort can be discovered. A serious burn, a bad fall or a blow may be followed by inflammation of the peritoneum.

In children, as in grown people, appendicitis may be complicated by peritonitis. Likewise, severe dysentery may produce such congestion of the intestines as to open the way for an infection of the peritoneum.

Septic sore throat may release so many pus-producing germs that the child may have peritonitis following the throat attack. Pneumonia, pleurisy and certain heart and brain disturbances may produce peritoneal complications.

Peritonitis begins with vomiting, high fever and pain. The abdomen becomes terribly swollen and hard to the touch. The child lies on the back with the knees drawn up to take the pressure off the swollen and painful abdomen. Sometimes a convulsion may be the first symptom.

Usually the comfort of the little patient can be promoted by the application of cold compresses to the swollen abdomen. A thin and not too heavy ice bag will help.

Sometimes the child will not tolerate cold. He may scream and give every evidence of increased discomfort. In such a case do not hesitate to substitute heat. Hot applications, particularly hot turpentine stupes, will help. Add a few drops of turpentine to a pan of hot water. Wring towels out of this and apply, hot as can be borne and cover with a dry towel.

Feeding will be difficult. Perhaps buttermilk can be retained. Perhaps milk acidified with a few drops of lemon juice will be acceptable.

The doctor will take charge of the little sufferer and prescribe the remedies.

Boils!

"Ouch!"

S.S.S. will rid you of boils, pimples, blackheads and skin eruptions!

DON'T CLOSE your eyes to the warning which Nature gives when angry, painful boils appear on your neck, face or other parts of your body. Boils, pimples and so-called skin disorders are the result of an impoverished condition of the blood and are not to be trifled with.

It is nothing more than folly to expect to get absolute relief from the use of local treatments, such as ointments, salves, etc. Such remedies may afford temporary relief but you want more than relief; you want a remedy which will rid you forever of the torturing disorder. And the one remedy which has no equal is S.S.S.

S.S.S. stops boils and keeps them from coming. S.S.S. builds blood-power! That is what makes fighting blood. Fighting blood destroys impurities. It fights boils! It fights skin eruptions—pimples, blackheads, eczema! It always wins! S.S.S. has been known since 1826 as one of the greatest blood builders, blood cleansers and system strengtheners ever produced. There are no unproven theories about S.S.S., the scientific results of each of its purely vegetable medicinal ingredients are admitted by authorities. Begin taking S.S.S. today and clear your skin of those blood disorders!

Platinum Not for Brunettes.

Susan Ricker Knox, portrait painter, in discussing jewelry for women has advised blondes to wear platinum and brunettes to stick to gold. Platinum is too "cold" for most brunettes, she said, though it is just the thing for the average blonde who wears costly rings. IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. COUNTY SCHOOL TEACHERS MEET

Dr. J. V. McMillan, Miami University, Delivers Chief Address.

"School should reflect the best and highest ideals of life," declared Dr. J. V. McMillan, of the teachers' college, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, during an address delivered in the David Anderson high school, Lisbon, Saturday, as a feature of the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Teachers' association.

Dr. McMillan delivered two addresses, one in the morning and another in the afternoon. During his morning address Dr. McMillan referred to the philosophy of life as it has to do with teaching, and in the afternoon his main reference was to details.

"The problems of course of study, of method and of ideals must find their setting in real life at its best." Dr. McMillan went on to say. "We can discover the elements of real life only by contact with real life situations. The chief life values are health, preparation to earn a living; social, civic and moral power; home making and culture and enjoyment.

"These can be realized only by making use of the activities of the learner. If children were left to themselves, they would play, observe things about them and then express themselves in various ways and communicate with each other.

"These are the days when we should break away from the books to get the real things of life. Learn to know your neighborhood. Inculcate the observing and historic spirit. Children must be observing and infering. Give them interest in something that they can find an outlet. Children should be taught to construct things, not only with their hands, but with their mind.

"If you make a mistake in correcting a child, apologize when you find you are in error and you will find yourself a bigger, better person for so doing."

At the joint meeting of the boards of education of the various townships in the county, County Health Commissioner Dr. T. T. Church dwelt at length upon the health conditions presented by some of the rural school buildings, which in some instances he declared were not of the best.

Dr. Church called the attention of the board members to the possibility of impure drinking water, the condition of lavatories, and the lack of other necessary conveniences about the school buildings and school yards.

"In order to have better health conditions among the young of our rural community, we must have the wholehearted support of those in charge of these buildings," Dr. Church suggested.

The annual meeting was presided over by E. P. Stonebraker, superintendent of the Leetonia schools. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. W. E. Wilton, pastor of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church.

"Faith of Our Fathers," was the opening hymn, the singing being in charge of Miss Mary Albright, director of music of the Lisbon schools.

Over 200 teachers attended this meeting, the attendance being somewhat larger than the record of a year ago.

A fair sized crowd witnessed the annual basketball battles between the Anabasis and Gradtim literary societies, both of which were won by the latter teams. The score was 44 to 1, as it happened that practically all the varsity players and subs are members of the Gradatim society. A Romance of the Spanish Main
CAPTAIN BLOOD
by RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyrighted, 1922, by Rafael Sabatini.

"CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Vitagraph picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

SYNOPSIS.

Peter Blood, a young Irish physician, is wrongly condemned as a rebel against King James and is deported to Bridgetown in Barbadoes. There he is purchased as a slave by Colonel Bishop, military commander, at the behest of Arabella, the Colonel's niece. A Spanish galleon, the Cinco Llagas, under command of Don Diego de Espinosa y Valdez, captures the city. While the Spaniards sack the city, Blood sends Mary and Arabella back of the city to safety. He leads his fellow rebels-convict on board the ship and captures it. Colonel Bishop goes on board and Blood holds the military commander as hostage while the ship puts out of port and sends Bishop over the gangplank. Don Diego, taken prisoner, is told by Blood to sail the ship to Curacao, a Dutch settlement, in return for his liberty. Jeremy Pitt, who had studied navigation, suspects Don Diego is betraying them.

Now to the seas of the Spanish Main and to the ways of the adventurers who sailed it, Captain Blood still entertained illusions. But the next dawn was to shatter them rudely and for ever.

Coming on deck before the sun was up, he saw land ahead, as the Spaniard had promised them last night.

Beating out aweather, against the gentle landward breeze he beheld a great ship on their starboard bow, that he conceived to be some three or four miles off, and—as well as he could judge her at that distance—of a tonnage equal if not superior to their own. Even as he watched her she altered her course, and going about came heading toward them, close hauled.

"Will I say a prayer for your soul?"

"There," said a soft voice behind him in liquid Spanish, "is the Promised Land, Don Pedro."

He turned sharply to face Don Diego, so sharply that the sly smile was not effaced from the Spaniard's coutenance before Captain Blood's eyes had flashed upon it.

"What land is that?" he demanded. "Will you have the effrontery to tell me that is the coast of Curacao. That land, you treacherous, forsworn Spanish dog, is the island of Hispaniola."

"Ah, perro ingles! You know too much," he said under his breath, and sprang for the Captain's throat.

Tight-locked in each other's arms they swayed a moment, then together they went down upon the deck, the Spaniard's feet jerked from under him by the right leg of Captain Blood. The Spaniard had depended upon choking the life out of Blood, and so gaining the half-hour that might be necessary to bring up that fine ship that was beating towards them. But all that Don Diego had accomplished was to betray himself completely.

"Will I say a prayer for your dirty soul now, whilst I am in this position?" Captain Blood was furiously mocking him.

"Who will pray for your soul, I wonder, when that galleon comes to lie board and board with you? Do you know what ship it is? It is the Encarnacion, the flagship of Don Miguel de Espinosa, the Lord Admiral of Castile, and Don Miguel is my brother. It is a very fortunate encounter. The Almighty, you see, watches over the destinies of Catholic Spain."

There was no trace of humor or urbanity now in Captain Blood. His light eyes blazed: his face was set.

He rose, relinquishing the Spaniard to his men. "Make him fast," he bade them. "Truss him, wrist and heel, but don't hurt him—not so much as a hair of his precious head."

Captain Blood regarded him steadily out of a face which, if impassive, had paled under its deep tan. About the prisoner, clamant, infuriated, ferocious, the rebels-convict surged, almost literally "athirst for his blood."

"Wait," Captain Blood imperiously commanded, and turning on his heel, he went aside to the rail. As he stood there deep in thought, he was joined by Hagthorpe, Wolverstone, and Ogle the gunner. In silence they stared with him across the water at that other ship.

"In less than half-an-hour," said Blood presently, "we shall have her athwart our hawse, sweeping our decks with her guns."

"We can fight," said the one-eyed giant with an oath.

"Fight!" sneered Blood. "Undermanned as we are, mustering a bare twenty men, in what case are we to fight? No, there would be only one way. To persuade her that all is well aboard, that we are Spaniards, so that she may leave us to continue on our course."

Ogle, with a bent for sarcasm, interposed a suggestion bitterly.

"We might send Don Diego de Espinosa in a boat manned by his Spaniards to assure his brother the Admiral that we are all loyal subjects of his Catholic Majesty."

"Ledad! ye've said it. He doesn't fear death, this damned pirate; but his son may take a different view. Filial piety's mighty strong in Spain." He swung on his heel abruptly, and strode back to the knot of men about his prisoner. "Here!" he shouted to them. "Bring him below."

In the ward-room the three stern chasers were in position, loaded, their muzzles thrusting through the open ports, precisely as the Spanish gunners had left them.

"Here, Ogle, is work for you," said Blood, and as the burly gunner came thrusting forward through the throng of gaping men, Blood pointed to the middle chaser: "Have that gun hauled back," he ordered.

When this was done, Blood beckoned those who held Don Diego.

"Lash him across the mouth of it," he bade them, and whilst, assisted by another two, they made haste to obey, he turned to the others. "To the roundhouse, some of you, and fetch the Spanish prisoners. And you, Dyke, go up and bid them set the flag of Spain aloft."

Don Diego, with his body stretched in an arc across the cannon's mouth, legs and arms lashed to the carriage on either side of it, eyeballs rolling in his head, glared maniacally at Captain Blood. A man may not fear to die, and yet be appalled by the form in which death comes to him.

Captain Blood vouchsafed him a malignant smile, before he turned to meet the fifteen manacled Spanish prisoners. From amongst them a comely, olive-skinned stripling, distinguished in bearing and apparel from his companions, started forward with an anguished cry of "Father!"

Writhing in the arms that made haste to seize and hold him, he called upon heaven and hell to avert this horror, and lastly, addressed to Captain Blood an appeal for mercy that was at once fierce and piteous.

Recovering the cynicism in which he had approached his task, the cynicism essential to its proper performance, Blood commanded Ogle to kindle a match and remove the leaden apron from the touch-hole of the gun that bore Don Diego. Then, as the younger Espinosa broke into intercessions mingled with imprecations, he wheeled upon him sharply.

"Peace!" he snapped. "It is your father's treachery that has brought us into this plight and deliberately into risk of capture and death aboard that ship of Spain. Just as your father recognized his brother's flagship, so will his brother have recognized the Cinco Llagas. So far, then, all is well. But presently the Encarnacion will be sufficiently close to perceive that here all is not as it should be. Sooner or later, she must guess or discover what is wrong, and then she will open fire or lay us board and board. Understand this clearly: to the first shot from the Encarnacion this gun will fire the answer. I make myself clear, I hope?"

"But, name of God, how should it be clear," young Espinosa cried. "Can you avert the fight? If you know a way, and if I, or these, can help you to it in Heaven's name let me hear it."

VERSE AND WORSE

Grandaddy Jim.

Grandaddy Jim—I would sing you a hymn
Built on the praises of Grandaddy Jim—
Grandaddy Jim with his grey shock of hair,
Loitering there in his wreck of a chair;
Grandaddy Jim with his stories to tell.
Gone—yes, but oh, I remember him well.
Kindly and true is the story of him.
Ev'ry one loved him so—Grandaddy Jim.

Weathered and old were the yarns told to me,
Just a wee lad, on his rheumatic knee.
Calendars say that was long years gone by;
I don't believe it so; seems now that I
Heard them all yesterday, tales sweet and old,
Mystic and quaint that his feeble lips told.
Whiskered and aged and feeble of limb,
Oh, but his heart was young—Grandaddy Jim.
Sunshine just seemed to encircle his chair
Like it was proud to be lingering there
Close to the soul of him. Then, after while,
He went away, and the skies seemed to smile.
Happy to think he was caming along,
Coming to stay with his smile and his song.
Days when the sun's beaming over the rim
Seems like he smiles at me—Grandaddy Jim.

Japs Consider Extensive Plans to Encourage Korean Industry

Governor-general Saito Urges That Nation Plant 1,000,000 Acres of Farm Lands.

TOKYO, March—Extensive schemes for the development of agriculture and the encouragement of industry in Korea are under consideration by the Japanese government, according to Baron Minoru Saito, governor general of Korea, who is now in Tokyo pressing the claims of his territory before the imperial diet.

The chief feature of the plans which Baron Saito is sponsoring involves government subsidies sufficient to make possible the development of approximately 1,000,000 acres of land for rice culture. It is estimated that nearly 40,000,000 bushels of rice could be produced annually on this land.

The Japanese government already is assisting agriculture in Korea to the extent of about $350,000 annually but, according to Baron Saito, this is far from enough. If the plan he proposes is adopted, Baron Saito declares, Japan can get enough rice from Korea to be virtually independent of other countries. As things now are Japan is compelled to import millions of bushels of rice annually to meet the demands of her home market.

Plan Worked Out.

Under the plan now being considered, a comprehensive development program would be outlined and followed over a period of about ten years. Baron Saito estimates that within that time it would be possible to put under cultivation virtually all the land in Korea that is suitable for rice growing and insure maximum production for the country.

But for the earthquake of September, 1923, and the subsequent economic depression in Japan, the Korean development work already would have been undertaken by the government, Baron Saito believes.

With the prospect of normal prosperity returning to Japan at an early date, the governor general of Korea is confident funds will soon be available for carrying out his scheme.

Aside from rice growing, silk culture is becoming increasingly popular and profitable in Korea, according to Baron Saito. The silk cocoons are better than those grown in Japan and the Korean climate more suitable to silk growing, he says, than is that of Japan.

Need Railroads.

Industrially the chief need of Korea, the governor general declares, is railroads. In all the country there are only about 1,500 miles of railway lines and at least twice that mileage is needed to give the country adequate rail transportation facilities.

Given better transportation, Baron Saito believes, factories would be established and general industrial development of Korea would follow. There are no government plans as yet for railway building and private capital, Baron Saito says, is needed for these enterprises.

Politically, Baron Saito admitted, there is considerable unrest in Korea. Radical elements, financed, according to the governor general, from outside sources, are active and have obtained an appreciable foothold among the people. More efficient laws for the suppression of seditious activities, Baron Saito believes, are needed.

Father Freed.

MIDDLEPORT, March — Ed Snyder of Pityme was arrested and brought here on the charge of giving his ten-year-old son whisky in sweetened water. Officers who brought the child in said he was drunk on some intoxicant. The father was discharged later because of lack of evidence, it was claimed.

Queen Gives Her Favorite Brooch to Mrs. Kellogg

LONDON, March—Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, wife of the secretary of state of the United States, can display a gift from Queen Mary of England.

Just before Mrs. Kellogg left London she received a small box from Buckingham Palace. Enclosed therein was a note in the Queen's own handwriting, asking her to accept a quaint brooch, containing three big amethysts and a pearl. This brooch has been worn almost constantly for years by the Queen and was one of her favorite jewels. The gift of it to Mrs. Kellogg was a mark of high personal regard from the Queen.

Conventional Hood, Longer Wheelbase, Lower Slung Body Feature New Series 11 Franklins

New Franklin Radically Changed in Appearance

As Styled by de Causse Franklin Now Has Custom Effect Entirely New to American Design—Seven Types, Conservative and Conventional, Being Displayed by the Buckeye Motor Co.

Franklin has done the unexpected. This is the concensus of opinion among those who have seen the new designs, styled by de Causse, on public display this week for the first time by the Buckeye Motor company, corner Sixth and Walnut streets.

From the point of view of the man in the street, the most striking thing about them is the radical way in which they differ from anything that Franklin has ever produced in the past. Until he looks at the hubcaps or insignia, the average man will not be able to say even whether the cars were made here or abroad.

The changes which first strike the eye are those in the hood. The straight radiator effect of entirely new lines and proportions now replaces the old inclined grille and rounded hood contour, which has been peculiar to Franklin for years. The wheelbase has been lengthened and frame lowered, bringing the body three inches nearer the ground.

From the point of view of the motor car designer, the cars have a custom look throughout, which also reflects certain foreign style elements. This is explained by the fact that the pattern cars were actually custom built by de Causse, and first shown by him at America's custom body builders' show at the Commodore Salon in New York a year ago. These models cost $10,000 each to build. At the Salon they made such an impression that they were given the most prominent location on the floor.

Beautiful Radiator Effect.

The designer, de Causse, is a motor car stylist of international reputation. He has been responsible for some of the most famed and most exclusive European cars, and in America, has done custom work for practically all of the manufacturers of high-priced cars.

An effect which is both entirely individual and fine appearing, is produced by the head-on view of the hood with its broad nickeled radiator shell having flat nickel bars, three in number, extending down the front and terminating at the bottom in a circle of the same material.

Custom Style Features

Numerous style features are introduced in the bodies which have not been seen before in anything but made-to-order cars. Over-all height has been noticeably reduced, yet head room and ground clearance remain the same. Fenders are crowned and beautifully molded. All this adds tremendously to the good appearance of the car.

An important influence on the final result is the latitude which the designer had in making all the elements in car construction, such as headlights, bumpers, size of wheels and even shape of hub-caps, contribute to the style effect.

Seven types are available: five enclosed —Sedan, Sport Sedan, Coupe, Cabriolet and Enclosed-Drive Limousine; and the Touring and Sport Runabout. Of these the Sport Sedan, Cabriolet and Sport Runabout are new to the Franklin line, and the Coupe is radically different.

Striking New Note in Open Cars

The two open cars are a distinct departure from ordinary open car standars in America, the purpose being to furnish a Touring and Runabout which both in style requirements and in power performance will cater to the most exacting and discriminating motorist.

Sport car details never before seen here are incorporated, illustrative of these being the English hoopstick construction for the top, with its highly polished, nickel-mounted bows and fine drab Burbank material. The Touring is finished in moleskin gray-green, and the Runabout in silver gray. The sweeping rear contour of the Runabout is another detail wholly new to America.

High-Powered Chauffeur-Driven Car in Line

Foremost in interest among the closed cars is the Cabriolet—the latest in strictly chauffeur-driven cars, and the first noteworthy American response to the demand for a compact, agile, powerful town car of the highest quality. Paint and trim for this car are to order from a wide choice. Both in this car and in the Enclosed-Drive Limousine, two folding seats are provided to supplement the space for three which the rear seat offers.

The Coupe, distinguished by its companionable seat, broad enough for three, and by its English coach-boot construction at the rear, will also be found of interest. The interior is leather upholstered, and a special front-post construction gives the clearest possible view on all sides. Both this car and the Sport Sedan make use of the Landau leather rear quarter which adds such a rakish touch to the ensemble. The Sport Sedan has a smart luggage deck with polished guards.

Car Complete, Ready for Driver

Franklin has inaugurated the policy of providing equipment, spare tire and cover, all included in the catalog price. In other words, a customer at any point in the country buys a car ready for the road, at a uniform price, with only the tax and freight extra. Equipment includes front bumper, rear bumperettes, balloon tires, Watson Stabilators, stop-light, rear vision mirror, automatic windshield wiper, adjustable sun visor, Waltham clock, tire carrier and lock, spare tire and cover, oil gauge, ammeter.

Upholstery for the Sedan, Sport Sedan and Enclosed-Drive Limousine is 21 ounce finest quality broadcloth, stock-dyed and doeskin-finished. Windemere mountings are specified. Tan Beige, Marne Green and Franklin Blue are the colors used for the exterior. In all cases, shields and fenders are black. Body color is set off by a fine triple stripe—black edged with white.

The Series 11 Franklins incorporate the 49% power increase introduced in the previous model. The chassis incorporates some interesting new mechanical developements, related chiefly to the changes incident to the greater size and longer, lower-slung character of the new model.

RUM PIRATES AWE BRITISH, LOOT VESSEL

WHISKY SEIZED

Cover Crew With Guns, Lock Captain in Room.

LONDON, March — American "rum pirates" out-pirate the pirates of the Spanish Main, if all that Captain J. T. Tweedie says of them is true.

Captain Tweedie is back in London after an adventuresome experience with pirates of "Rum Row" and hopes that he will never again have to encounter such pirates.

Tweedie says that he signed on the good ship Veronica at Bremen, as chief officer, with no intention of becoming a rum-runner, for articles of agreement were signed for a voyage to Melilla. While at sea orders were given to the ship to proceed to Bermuda, thence to a point 25 miles south of Montauk Point, New York.

Off Montauk a number of speed boats came out and took 4,500 cases of whisky ashore and then trouble began, Tweedie says.

"A representative of the promoters and another man came aboard to arrange for the purchase of the remainder of the cargo," Captain Tweedie said.

"The former individual asked what protection we could give him, and he was told we had three revolvers and one rifle.

"It was agreed that he should go ashore and charter a schooner to fetch the remainder of the cargo. Three days later a speed boat came alongside, and I received an individual who represented himself as a prospective buyer, and showed him to the captain's cabin. Another man came aboard, apparently sick, and I gave him some whisky and then went on deck to prepare to discharge the cargo.

"To my amazement I found myself covered by two guns and was ordered to put my hands up. The next thing I noticed was the crew were covered with nine guns directed from the pirates' boat. The captain and myself were locked and barred in the petty officers' mess room.

"After two days' imprisonment the pirate mate ordered me aft, where I met the pirate captain.

"'I want you to do something for me,' he said. 'You play a straight game with me and I will with you.'

"While I was taking a sight and working out the position of the ship the guns were fixed on me all the time.

"For six days we were cruising about waiting for a schooner to come. When it was sighted I was made a prisoner again. At night I was let out and ordered to help discharge cargo. Our crew was put to the same task, and working at the point of the revolver the whole time we got about 5,000 cases aboard the schooner, then she left us.

"Back to my prison I went, almost starving. The pirate mate then told me a revenue cutter had been sighted. 'You'll get two years the same as us,' he said, and I told him I wasn't sorry, for anything was better than what I was undergoing. For reasons I can only hint at the revenue cutter cleared off.

"Three days later a three-masted schooner came alongside and all hands were ordered into the hold to again discharge cargo. I was weak and the work soon exhausted me. All the sympathy I got was a kick. I tried to work, but fell. For that I was given a blow on the nose and lay streaming in blood, not caring if the pirates killed me. I don't know when the pirates left us, for I was still lying in the hold, bleeding profusely.

"I was hoisted out of the hold and on deck found a notice from the pirate captain telling us what course to take and adding: "I am going to follow you. We have a machine gun and will riddle the whole ship if you dare to disobey.' Our ship was in an awful state. The pirates had taken out the shafting of the engine, broken the compass and only left us sail power. Ill provisioned, and with our crew disillusioned, we were eventually picked up and towed into Halifax.

At the first sign of skin trouble apply Resinol

That patch of eruption is not necessarily a serious matter! Even in severe, well-established cases of eczema, ringworm or similar affections, Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap usually relieve the itching at once and quickly overcome the trouble completely. How much more, then, can this simple, inexpensive treatment be relied on to dispel skin troubles in their earlier stages.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For samples of each, free, write to Dept. 1-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH INDIGESTION

Mr. Allan Small, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I have always lived in fear of heart trouble—my father, as well as my mother's sister, died from this dreaded affliction when I was a child. As it was on both sides of my family and I had often heard it was hereditary, I lived in dread and fear

"As I have had at intervals severe abdominal pains, heart-burn and pressure on the heart, I felt there was no relief so I became reconciled to the horrible truth I was doomed, nothing could be done and must await my time to go as my father and mother's sister I never dreamed I might only have intestinal indigestion, and my trouble was sour and acid stomach, causing gas pressure on the heart. Thanks to a friend who suggested Carter's Little Liver Pills as a remedy for faulty intestinal elimination, I am now free from the dreaded fear and enjoy all around good health. Small pills, easy to take and relieve the bowels in a rational way, with pleasant after effects." For sale at all druggists.

That women, crazed for social position, will sometimes drag their husbands right into financial disaster, is a point brought out by Cecil B. De Mille in his newest production for Paramount, "The Golden Bed," which will be shown four days, starting today at the Ceramic theatre.

Lillian Rich, the latest screen "discovery" to make a bid for stellar honors under De Mille, and Vera Reynolds whom that director brought into prominence in "Feet of Clay," play out a verbal duel, wage a battle of wits for social mastery. For once the men in the families are mere pawns in the game.

"The Golden Bed" was written for the screen by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel of the same name by Wallace Irwin. Rod La Docque has the leading man's role in the production. We first find him a struggling young candy maker who, by dint of hard work, becomes the owner of a large chain of stores.

Flora Lee Peake (Lillian Rich), hope of a poor but proud family who before young Holtz, played by La Rocque, had made his money wouldn't have anything to do with him, now sees a way to retrieve the family fortune—become Mrs. Holtz.

The other sister (Vera Reynolds), however, has been in love with Holtz from the very beginning and it is when she sees the possibility of losing him that the fun begins.

De Mille has made a picture of this Irwin novel that is going to prove more popular than anything he has ever attempted before, excepting, of course, "The Ten Commandments."

The three aforementioned players all have featured roles in the cast of the picture as have Warner Baxter, Theodore Kostloff and Julia Faye.

Here's a picture that affords De Mille every opportunity for beautiful women, spectacular scenes, gorgeous gowns and all the rest.

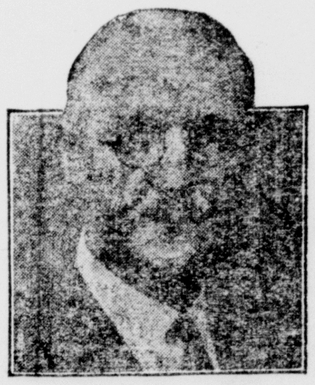
Says Remedy Gave Him Permanent Relief From Stomach Trouble After Six Years' Sufferings.



REV J. F. ELMORE,
West Charleston, W. Va.

Rev. J. F. Elmore, for the past 12 years in charge of the Adventist Church at West Charleston, W. Va., and for 13 years prior the pastor of a congregation at Clay, W. Va., his parsonage and home being at 1318 Crescent Road, is a self-avowed great booster for Ka-di-ok, the renowned herbal tonic and system toner, which is being so much talked about at present for its wonderful recuperating powers.

To the Ka-di-ok representative Rev. Mr. Elmore said he had suffered for the past six years excruciating misery with his stomach; that he barely kept himself alive by eating predigested foods and absorbing some of the tonics on the markets, and only obtained permanent relief until after he had taken Ka-di-ok.

"I read of Ka-di-ok while I was recovering from smallpox," said Rev. Elmore, "and I immediately procured some when I could get out. I gained from 195 to 210 pounds in a short while, I am now free from stomach trouble, sleep fine, I have no weakness like I had before, and I am a great booster for that medicine. I have been the means of a great number of people having purchased Ka-di-ok from what I have told them of my remarkable recovery."

Not only the reverend, but his good wife also sends in words of praise, not alone for what it did for her, but for the remarkable change in her husband's physical condition.

Ka-di-ok is sold and recommended in East Liverpool by Math-Cut Rate Medicine Store, 129 W. 6th street.

RUNYON SAYS

BY DAMON RUNYON.
Copyright, 1925, International News Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, March 16, 1925. This column is commencing to read like the one the writer compiled daily quite some years ago for the Pueblo Chieftain.

That was the title, "Personal Mention."

The writer, then a bustling young "cub" reporter, with a large notebook, went around and about the hotels and stores of Pueblo, finding out who was going away and where, and why; who was ill, and of what; who was visiting in the city and whom, and who had a new position, and what.

"The idea is to get the name of every person in this town in the paper every two or three months," said the city editor, a gentleman now, by the way, bald-headed, and married and living in Los Angeles.

It was interesting work. The most interesting part of it was the things the young reporter learned about people that he couldn't put in "Personal Mention." It afforded him excellent study in human nature.

The same reporter has learned a few things about people of your acquaintance out here in Los Angeles that he can't put in this "Personal Mention."

But only a few. Most everybody out here is happy, contented, doing well. That is what the writer likes best of all to chronicle—that someone is DOING WELL.

Let us see whom we have today.

MAURICE McLOUGHLIN, the most colorful, spectacular champion that ever swung a racket, is with Spalding's, in Los Angeles.

It doesn't take an old man to recall McLaughlin's first visit to New York. They may have been greater tennis players than McLoughlin. There has never been one of his dash, and fire, and human interest.

MAY SUTTON BUNDY, one of California's famous women tennis players, a champion in her day, lives in Los Angeles. Her husband, Tom Bundy, also a noted player, is in the real estate business here.

"DUTCH LEONARD, the American League lefthander, who figured in about four world's series, took the money he made in baseball and invested in fruit lands near Fresno. He has one of the showplaces of that region, welcomes all wayfarers hospitably, is accounted wealthy.

Donlin originally came from the coast. He was one of the most picturesque players ever in the game. His name is still as well remembered as if he were still playing. That, indeed, is FAME in baseball.

ADAM WALSH, Notre Dame center, the greatest center this writer ever saw, lives out here. His father has a grocery store in Hollywood. The football fans of Los Angeles are still talking of that Notre Dame backfield.

The baseball fans of Los Angeles say the best pitcher in the Pacific Coast league last season was Ol' Doc Otey Crandall, once of the Giants.

Crandall isn't so very old in years. But he has been called Ol' Doc so long he ACTS old. The writer gave him the title when Crandall was with the Giants. Its significance is now rather vague. It was well understood at the time it was applied.

McGraw used Crandall almost exclusively as a relief pitcher. He was literally a doctor of disabled ball games. He was one of the few men the writer ever saw who had a real good slow ball and with it NERVE enough to put it up to a batter IN A PINCH.

That was mainly Crandall's success as a relief pitcher—his slow ball, and his NERVE.

He usually came in behind blinding speed that the opposition had suddenly gauged. The change from speed to Crandall's slow delivery stopped the slugging. He saved many ball games for McGraw.

The name "Ol' Doc" somehow fitted Crandall's personality. He was a thick-set, loggy-looking fellow, drawling of speech, of country aspect generally. He was a great hitter in streaks. McGraw often used him as a pinch hitter.

To hear them talk of the "Ol' Doc" out here you might think he is positively antique. He is probably still well under forty.

Crandall always took good care of himself. He drank about one glass of beer per year when he was with the Giants. He was drinking his annual glass glass in a Pittsburgh saloon after winning a tough game, one hot day, when McGraw walked in.

McGraw fined Crandall $100 for the ONE glass. McGraw believed in picking shining marks for his examples.

Other ball players out here who will be recalled by big league fans are Salida Tom Hughes, once of the Yankees and other clubs, and Truck Hannah, also once of the Yanks.

Walter Kimmick, ex-Red, Almost Certain to Land Second-base Berth; His Ability Pleases Philly Pilot.

By Davis J. Walsh.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 16.—Once upon a time there was a group of worthy but altogether mediocre young men who suddenly recognized the fact that their manager had been born white, didn't spill egg on his vest and habitually washed behind the ears. They deemed him a gentleman and a scholar, went out of their earnest way to please him and live happily ever after.

This is not a bed time story. It is the story of the poor but honest Phillies, as outlined to the writer. The story of an almost hopeless inefficient ball club that fairly bristles with hope from Arthur Fletcher, the clean-eared manger, right on down to Heine Sand, the shortstop who didn't realize there was a lot of kidding going around and insisted that bearing down was one of the things that was being done these days.

The Phils, in short, may be going nowhere in particular, but they decline to do it quietly.

Sand, by the way, is one of comparatively few 1924 relics who figure to hold his job. Nelson "chicken" Hawks, once a Yankee, and later of Nashville, has replaced Holke at first base. Walter Kimmick, ex-Red, has moved right into second base from the Vernon Coast league club. A young man, C. B. Hober by name, and gifted by nature, will play third. He is up with the Phils from Beaumont and Fletcher thinks he will stay. Nothing personal behind this threat.

"He's the sweetest looking infielder I've seen in a long time," said Fletcher, referring to Kimmick. "He seems to be able to do anything at second base and I'll venture to say his hitting has improved fifty percent. He stands up there like Hornsby now."

Kimmick and Huber have eliminated Russell Wrightstone except for utility measures. Leland Durham, a semi-pro from Atlanta, Illinois, and Leonard Metz, from Waterbury, Conn., also are striving but no one seems to be the wiser. Horace Ford has retired to a life of ease and refinement.

There are plenty of outfielders and some of them are good. Cy Williams will adorn centerfield, leaving Harper, Mokan, Scnultz and George Burns, the elder, to debate the remaining places.

The Phils also have many pitchers, so-called. The best of the lot are Jimmy Ring, Wilbur Hubbell, Hal Carlson, Clarence Mitchell, Walter Beetts and John Couch, veterans, and Dana Fillingim, back again from Beaumont; Oran O'Neal, from the same spot; Ray Pierce, from Topeka, and Frank Ulrich from Waterbury.

Chicago Team Reaches Peak

BUFFALO, N. Y., Mar. 16—The North Central Alley bowling five today were in first place in the five man event in the A. B. C. bowling tournament in progress here. Bowling in the last squad last night the Chicagoans capped a day of sensations by rolling up a total of 2,937 in the five man event to take the lead for only a few hours with the 2,905 tally rolled Sunday morning.

Fred Mounts and Joe Fulton, an Indianapolis team, captured the leadership in the two man event. They smashed out a tourney record with a 493 game.

Nurmi Will Decide On Distance Races For Boston Games

BOSTON, March 16.—The distance which Paavo Nurmi will run at the initial indoor games of the Boston Lodge of Elks at Mechanics' building, March 31, will be decided by Nurmi himself.

Hugo Quist, acting for Nurmi, has notified the athletic committee of the Elks that the great Finnish athlete would compete at any distance the management desires, but the management of the athletic committee wishes to have the Finn name his own distance.

Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star, has notified the committee that he will compete at any distance from one to three miles. Lloyd Hahn and other stars will compete against Nurmi and Ray.

Kearns, in New York, Listens to Offers For Dempsey Battle

NEW YORK, March 16.—With Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, in New York, it was expected today that numerous offers would be made for a bout featuring the champion to be held in the late summer at an open air arena in this vicinity.

Charley Henderson, promoter of a Long Island stadium, conferred with Kearns but Kearns said no definite proposition was made to him. Jimmy De Forest, newly appointed matchmaker of the Polo ground A. C., was to meet with Kearns and elaborate on the offer of the "greatest sum Dempsey ever received for a bout." Tex Rickard also is expected to make an offer for Dempsey's services.

Veteran Marathon Runner to Compete In Boston Events

BOSTON, March 16.—Clarence H. DeMar, veteran marathon runner of Melrose, has entered the annual marahon of the B. A. A. to be held April 19. DeMar has won the event three times and is anxious to make it four this year.

Laughlin 4 Bowlers Will Take on East End Squad Tonight

Foremen of the No. 4 Laughlin clay shop, new contenders in the series of inter-plant duckpin contests, will take on the East End clay shop foremen tonight on the Reibel and Pelts driveways in the East End.

The match is scheduled to start at 7:30.

Christians, Boulevards Cage Winners

Hand Losing Scores to First Presbyterians and Penn. Ave.

First Christian passers defeated the First Presbyterians, 27 to 24, and the Park Boulevards won as they pleased from the Penn. Ave. M. E., 39 to 18, in Sunday school league contests Saturday night at the "Y."

The opening clash of the evening was one of the best played games of the season. The contest was anybody's from start to finish, neither club having more than a six point lead at any stage of the engagement. Only in the last half minute did the Christians cinch the honors.

The Presbyterians led at the end of the first quarter, 8 to 4. But the Christians tied up the count at the half, when the score stood 12-12.

They were still deadlocked at the end of the third quarter, 15 to 15. In the final period the Christians found the basket and began to draw ahead. Seven points behind, the Presbyterians started a rally which put them within one point of the opposition, Hall, Allison and McVey registering field goals. Kilmer, however, caged the ball in the last half minute and gave the Christians a three-point margin. Hall, McVey and C. Allison were the Presbyterian stars. All the winners played good ball.

The Parks enjoyed a practice romp with their East End opponents, missing many shots in addition to what they made. Azdell, Guyton and McKee were the Boulevard stars, while McKim, Augelbright and Rose performed well for the losers.

The lineups:

First Christian		First Presby.
Owen	F.	C. Allison
Kilmer	F.	McVey
Howard	C.	Householder
Bloor	G.	Hall
Heddleston	G.	N. Allison

Field goals—Howard 3, Owen 2, Kilmer 2, Bloor, Heddleston, McVey 4, C. Allison 3, Hall 2.

Park Boulevards		Penn Ave. M. E.
Kirkham	F.	McKim
Barnes	F.	Rose
Guyton	C.	Cook
McKee	G.	Augelbright
J. Hall	G.	Moore

Substitutions—Azdell for Kirkham, Crawford for J. Hall, Sanford for Cook, Staley for Rose, Rose for Moore.

Mount Keeps Floor Squad

Mount Union college basketball team, winner of eleven straight games in the Ohio conference and generally heralded as conference champion, will be an even harder team to defeat next season. Every member of the present squad is available for next winter, Capt. Lefty Miller, center, and Bo Labor, forward, are juniors, and the other members, Wilcoxen, Bromby and Orin are sophomores.

That basketball relations between Ohio Wesleyan and Mount Union will be resumed next season is the hope of many conference followers. Mount was victorious over the Delaware team in the 1923-24 season, but the teams did not clash this year, Wesleyan ending as runerup in percentage with twelve wins and one loss. The Ohio conference basketball schedule meeting is to be held at Columbus.

The new policy of the southern Ohio conference members, including Wesleyan, in first booking games between themselves before considering others, may complicate schedule making considerably this year. Western Reserve, though its prospects next year are not exceptional, will attempt to schedule a game with Mount Union at Cleveland.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16—It is probable that an even dozen will go to the post tomorrow in the $17,500 Louisiana derby at Jefferson park, which will bring winter racing in New Orleans to a close. The race over the course of a mile and a furlong probably will net the winner about $20,000.

SID JONES, FORMER STAR, TELLS OF HURLING DUEL IN 1911

Sid Jones, athletic coach at Warren high school, will never forget one afternoon in the midsummer of 1911.

Sid Jones at that time was a pitcher for the East Liverpool club in the O. & P. league, captained by Alex Sweeney, who also recalls vividly the afternoon in question. When the two met here recently, on the occasion of the visit of Warren's basketball team in the Ceramic City, they recalled the "good old days." Jones says:

"Though I endeavor to teach the boys of Warren how to play the pig-skin game, my heart goes out to the diamond sport. I pitched for a few teams in the old O. & P. league and became acquainted with numerous baseball celebrities. Everett Scott, dean of major league shortstops, used to stop the hot shots between second and third in this organization.

"The particular game to which I am referring was played in midsummer in 1911. The contest was played at Youngstown and I was doing slab duty for East Liverpool. The teams were in fine fettle and the game gradually developed into a hurling duel. That now ancient piece of baseball machinery, Earl Moseley, was sending up the shoots for the Steel City nine. The opposition manager to squeeze a marker across the plate and we tied the count an inning later.

"The duel for a run grew more and more intense and the crowd was constantly upon its feet as the battle breezed into the closing stanzas. The Youngstowners had nicked me for three bingles during the course of the afternoon.

"The fatal ninth finally started. Moseley disposed of our batters and I trudged to the mound. The first batter fell a victim to my fast ball. The next hitsmith shared the same fate. The third sticker swaggered to the scoring station and leisurely swung his heavy bludgeon across the plate. I wrapped my frame into a series of complex knots and released the pellet. The batter sent the ball through our infield, but one of the inner workmen booted the chance and the batter was on second by virtue of an overthrow. He stole third and menaced our tie.

"The following slugger skied high to the outfield and it looked as though another inning would be necessary to decide the issue of the contest. But this is the time that fate stepped in and took a hand in the tide of battle. The outfielder, with a fairly easy catch in view, tried for a spectacular capture, but fell into a water hole! Before the ball could be retrieved the runner had crossed the plate, winning the game 2-1. Moseley allowed five hits, while the victors garnered but a trio of wallops off my delivery."

Power Five Defeats Acmes; Seeks Contests With School Squads

The Power five of the M. E. church defeated the fast Acme club, 33 to 26, recently in a clash on the home floor. The first half found both teams tied, 24-24. Dickey, the Cunninghams and Bucher were the point getters for the winners. Mackey, Kinney and Manypenny were the chief performers for the Acmes. The Power passers are out with a challenge to Salineville or Irondale high school teams. The lineups:

Power		Acme
Dickey	F.	Manypenny
O. Cunningham	F.	Wolfe
I. Cunningham	C.	Mackey
Bucher	G.	Dyer
Rockhold	G.	Kinney

Substitutions — Shope for Bucher, Bucher for Rockhold.

Maranville Cracks Ankle

AVALON, Cal., March 16.—Rabbit Maranville will be lost to the Cubs for at least three months and the injury he received in yesterday's game in Los Angeles may cripple him permanently. The doctors were not exactly sure of how long he will be out of the lineup when the Cubs left Washington this morning.

The accident occurred in the eighth inning when Maranville slid into third base. He caught his right foot on the staple that anchors the bag and something gave. He was carried from the field. An examination immediately afterwards revealed that the fibula bone in the right ankle was cracked. The bone was not completely broken but ligaments were torn and physicians declared it would be impossible to forecast how long it would take to heal the injury, which will prove a severe blow to the Cubs.

Maranville had instilled pep into the Cubs' infield. He also was acting captain of the nine and his advice had proven valuable to the younger men of the infield.

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 16.—The Pirates won their first shutout of the season Sunday and the Paso Robles baseball club received a taste of major league baseball, when the home team club fell before the Buccaneers eight to nothing.

Mistakes on the part of the locals aided the Pirates and poor work on the paths hindered their own chances for piling up a few runs. Chief Feeley took the mound for the big leaguers and in four of the six rounds he worked got into trouble. His mates supported him well, in the field however, and he came through unscathed. Johnny Morrison finished with little trouble. Lee and McGrab handled the Pason Robles twirling assignment.

The Pirates scored five times in the second inning on four hits. Niehaus' triple being the big blow of the round. The last two runs came in the fifth, a walk and an error on a batted ball preceding Moore's three bagger to center.

We desire to extend our thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness during the long illness and death of our dear wife, daughter and sister.

We especially thank Rev. J. O. Campbell, Mrs. W. T. Anderson, Mrs. D. White. The singers who gave their services, all those who were so kind to donate automobiles, all those who donated the beautiful floral offerings, the Homer Laughlin plants Nos. 1 and 2 and No. 3, the Dresden clay shop, the Baraca class, and the Young Ladies' Missionary society.
